BLONDE ELUDES TRUNK MURDER HUNT

Today

Cheaper Money, Better Business.

Edison's Beliefs, His Business.

In Evil There Is Good.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WHEN MONEY becomes cheap, strange to say, business seems to improve.

France officially cut the value of the franc down 80 per cent. That was as though this country had reduced the value of a dollar to 20 cents.

France then proceeded to pay her debts with money worth one-fifth the amount borrowed. Englishmen, to their sorrow, had to take for loans that they had made to France in war time, money worth one-fifth of the amount they had paid.

FRENCHMEN THAT had bought their country's bonds were paid in money of the same kind, getting back 20 cents on the dollar, which is as though our government bonds should suddenly drop $80 on $100.

Did this ruin France? Not exactly.

Since the franc was knocked down, the French have accumulated $2,400,000,000 of gold metal. France has prospered enormously, with absolutely no unemployment, until very recently, and much less now than any country in Europe.

SINCE BRITAIN abandoned the gold standard, the pound dropping about one dollar in value on the world's exchange markets, business has improved in Great Britain.

FINANCE IS a queer, complicated thing. You cut 80 per cent from your currency's value and gather in the second biggest pile of gold in the world.

Or you keep your money at par, a hundred cents worth of currency meaning 100 cents worth of gold metal, as we do in America, and you accumulate the world's BIGGEST pile of gold.

IT MAY PLEASE you to learn that the "attack on the dollar" is a failure thus far in Europe.

Our dear friends over there would like to knock down the dollar's value. A cheap dollar would make it easier for them to buy our goods, or to pay their war debt, if they should suddenly get "an honor complex," and decide to pay us what they owe.

However, this is a creditor nation. It has the gold. It has the goods, the industries, the raw materials, the engineering talent, and its dollar is very solid.

It would be impregnable if we only had courage.

MANY PEOPLE are taking unnecessary interest in the religious beliefs and unbeliefs of Thomas A. Edison. It is shown that he contributed something to a society of free thinkers and to a monument in memory of Tom Paine. Meddlesome busybodies will admit that Thomas A. Edison had a right under our government and constitution to think and believe or not believe whatever he chose.

What he thought or believed is the business of nobody but himself.

He was a good American, a good worker, one who respected other men.

BIGOTS, FANATICS, and their tribe should respect his memory and take it for granted that whatever he thought was probably more accurate than anything that they could POSSIBLY think.

One thing is certain, if there is a heaven, as there undoubtedly is, Edison is there, sitting in the front row.

And if there is any possibility of improvement, in that celestial residence, he will furnish the improvement.

"IN ALL GOOD there is evil, in all evil there is good."

There was evil in our boom, which made people forget to save, and evil in high stock prices, which made millions of gamblers.

Now you learn that there is good in our depression. It is "purifying sports" in minor colleges.

Football receipts are falling off, and young gentlemen with necks as big around as the tops of their heads are no longer offered "scholarships" to play football for a new alma mater.

MR. CYRUS H. K. CURTIS cables from Vienna that Central Europe is filled "with reports of French financial pressure on America."

How a country that owes you four or five billions can exert "financial pressure" isn't made very clear.

But it is said positively that Premier Laval, now on his way here, will indicate that if the United States doesn't guarantee specifically the security of France against any possible real or imaginary attack, then France will not be kind to us economically.

MONSIEUR LAVAL and other Frenchmen know more about foreign countries than anyone in France knew previous to the enlightening war of 1870.

And Monsieur Laval surely knows that this country would not relish 'hreats even diplomatically veiled. But if he doesn't know it now, he will know it five minutes after he meets President Hoover.

NESBIT DIES IN AUTO CRASH

Former Bank of Pittsburgh President, Daughter in Accident Near Washington

Harison Nesbit, former president of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., was killed near Washington, D. C., today when the automobile in which he and his daughter, Edith C. Nesbit, were riding, struck a parked truck at Muirkirk, Md.

The daughter was taken to a Washington hospital, where it was found that she had suffered multiple fractures of the skull.

Nesbit, who had been prominent in Pittsburgh financial circles for many years, virtually gave up his Pittsburgh residence when he retired from the Bank of Pittsburgh last May.

Since that time he has been living at his country estate near Warrington, Va., where he conducted an extensive stock farm.

Mrs. Nesbit and her son, Scott H., left Warrenton for Washington, at 1:30 p. m., hurrying to the bedside of the daughter.

Another daughtre, Elizabeth, was not at the Warrenton home, but was to be notified of the accident later in the afternoon.

PINCHOT FIRES DR. M'CLELLAND

Announcement today by Dr. D. McClelland, Pittsburgh dentist and former Central High School football and baseball star and later University of Pittsburgh fullback, that he had received a letter from Govenor Gifford Pinchot dismissing him as a member of the State Athletic Commission was seen as the concluding chapter of one of the phases of the political strife that split the Republican Party wide open in the recent primary here.

Reports have been in circulation for months that the underlying reason for the break between County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern and James F. Malone was the naming of Dr. McClelland to the post last July 3 to succeed Havey J. Boyle, Pittsburgh sports editor, who had been in office since 1923, when boxing was legalized in the state.

REFUSED TO QUIT

In announcing his dismissal, Dr. McClelland revealed that he had refused two requests from the Governor that he resign, giving as his reason, the fact that the Gov-

While no definite route has been announced, the ship is expected to pass over Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and other smaller municipalities.

2 BANKS HERE CLOSE DOORS

The Monongahela National Bank, Sixth and Liberty avenues, failed to open its doors today, and about noon the Homewood-Peoples Bank, 618 Homewood avenue, was closed by the State Banking Department.

The Monongahela National was a depository of the Homewood-Peoples, according to Frank Sweigert, deputy bank examiner, and three directors of the former, were also directors in the latter bank. They are John C. MacMillan, Frederick C. MacMillan and M. S. Vandevort.

A statement issued by George E. Benson, the president of the Monongahela, said the bank was solvent and had closed to protect its depositors. He said the directtors hoped to effect a reorganization and reopen the bank.

The last statement of the Monongahela National showed deposits of $13,245,536 and total resources of $20,326,292.

Between June 30 and September 29, the date of the last statement, the deposits declined, it was revealed, more than $5,000,000.

Benson said:

GARLAND ASKS PAYROLL QUIZ

Demand for a thorough audit and survey of the payrolls of the various city departments grew today as Councilman Robert Garland added his indorsement to the plan. City Controller James P. Kerr intends to make only a partial survey of the payroll, during his audit of all city departments handling money.

L. M. Johnston, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, and Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, of the League of Women Voters, called on Kerr several days ago, proposing the survey. Kerr at that time said he had not the time to undertake such an extensive audit.

Backers of the movement say that a survey of city payrolls would show unnecessary employes and possible payroll "padding" in some departments. Garland said:

"I will back up the request of the League of Women Voters to have it done. No doubt, a lot of dead timber will be found. I think the dead timber should be weeded out and those who do little or nothing for their pay should not displace those who give good and efficient service.

"An analysis of the payroll should show what men's duties are. I also think there should be promotions within the service for meritorious work and

NEW RUBBER CAPS WORK OF EDISON

Aides Credit Thought Wave From Genius in Coma as Victory Caps 12-Year Hunt

Thomas A. Edison was buried today and almost from out the grave came news of his last and what may prove to be his greatest invention—the creation of synthetic rubber from goldenrod.

Meanwhile, the nation was to join in a "minute of darkness" tribute at 10 o'clock tonight.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 21.—Thomas A. Edison beat death by five days to his last great invention, the manufacture of synthetic rubber from goldenrod and other ingredients.

Synthetic rubber, this correspondent learned from authoritative sources today, was finally proved practical in the wizard's laboratories last Tuesday, even as Edison sank downward through a stupor into the coma which ended in his death.

The final series of experiments, which ended a 12-year search for a substitute for rubber under Edison's own direction, were com-

MRS. WINNIE RUTH JUDD

Mrs. Judd, the physician's wife widely hunted on the Pacific Coast as a suspect in the trunk murders of two women.

SLAYING OF 2 BLAMED ON JEALOUSY

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, 26, slender blonde wife of a physician and daughter of a minister, remained at large today despite the efforts of thousands of officers seeking her as the perpetrator of the Phoenix trunk murders.

The motive behind the slayings still was almost as much of a mystery today as it was Monday night when the bodies of her victims, Mrs. Agnes Leroi, 32, and Miss Hedvig Samuelson, 24, were taken from trunks which Mrs. Judd had shipped from Phoenix.

SEARCH ART COLONY

Search today was being concentrated in the vicinity of Laguna Beach, artists' colony, 60 miles south of here, following a report given by a motorist that a woman hitch-hiker, corresponding to Mrs. Judd's description, had been given a ride to that point.

Officers again subjected her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, and her brother, Burton J. McKinnell, to a thorough questioning. Both men had been held as material witnesses, but were released from custody last night.

In the meantime word was awaited by the Coroner for the disposition of the bodies of the victims.

INNOCENT, SAYS FATHER

The bodies were found in two trunks and a suitcase at the Southern Pacific Railroad station. The body of Miss Samuelson had been dismembered, portions of it being found in one of the trunks and in the suitcase.

Lloyd J. Andrews, county attorney for Maricopa County, Ariz., arrived last night by plane from Phoenix. He said:

"We have considered the possible jealousy of Mrs. Judd for her husband aroused by Mrs. Leroi or Miss Samuelson or both; jealousy between the women themselves and the so-called narcotic and liquor angles, but they are all insufficient to prove a motive.

"The principal thing in the case now, as I see it, is that Mrs. Judd is missing, and a motive for the crime is lacking. The first and most important thing is to apture Mrs. Judd."

Hoover Asks Lights Out In Edison Salute Tonight

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—President Hoover has issued a statement suggesting that all individuals in the United States extinguish their lights for one minute tonight as a tribute to the memory of Thomas A. Edison. The President set 10 p. m., as the moment for the tribute, in eastern standard time. The President's statement read:

"The grief of every American in the passing of one of the great benefactors of humanity has manifested itself in the suggestion from hundreds of citizens that the nation should join in a solemn tribute to the memory of Thomas Alva Edison.

"In response to this universal desire to pay personal respect to Mr. Edison's memory, I suggest that all individuals should extinguish their lights for one minute on Wednesday evening, October 21, at 10 o'clock eastern time. It is my understanding that the broadcasting companies will undertake a brief program in respect to Mr. Edison's memory at this moment.

"The suggestion had been made that the electrical current at generating plants should be turned off at these hours, but on inquiry I find, (and this is confirmed by Thomas Edison, Jr.), that this would constitute a great peril to life throughout the country because of the many services dependent upon electrical power in protection from fire, the operation of water supply, sanitation, elevators, operations in hospitals and the vast number of activities which, if halted even for an instant, would result in death somewhere in the country. It is not, therefore, advisable. This demonstration of the dependence of the country upon electrical current for its life and health is in itself a monument to Mr. Edison's genius."

Pittsburgh streets will be in darkness one minute at 10 o'clock tonight in tribute to the memory of Thomas A. Edison, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang announced. In Harrisburg, Gov. Pinchot asked all Pennsylvanians to join in the tribute of darkness.

DEMOCRATS PIN HOPE FOR LAWRENCE ON KLINE-COYNE AID

AIM TO DEFEAT BARR THROUGH STRATEGY

G. O. P. Offices Dormant With Vote for County's Control Two Weeks Off

By MARK SHIELDS

If it was not for the activity of Independent headquarters promoting the candidacies for County Commissioner of former Senator C. M. Barr and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, who also has a Republican nomination, the voters would hardly know that a county-wide general election is less than two weeks off with absolute control of the county government hanging in the balance.

Republican headquarters is almost dormant considering that McGovern and Senator William D. Mansfield, as well as the remainder of the ticket, are certain of election.

DEMOCRATIC STRATEGY

Democratic headquarters seems to be employing a strategy based mainly on such help as can be secured from the Kline-Coyne city Republican machine, hoping that in many districts this combination will throw votes to David L. Lawrence, a Democratic candidate for Commissioner, after giving a vote to one or the other of the Republican candidates. In this way the Democrats hope to overcome the Independent vote for Barr.

This is an old policy of the local Democratic organization, as John M. Henry, an independent Democrat, pointed out in a speech yesterday at Independent headquarters, supporting the candidacy of Barr. The Democratic leaders usually have been content to go along with Republican bosses in return for minority patronage. The system saved the Republicans the cost of a fight at the general election, and the Democrats secured "the leavings" without much exertion.

UPSET INDICATED

This program was upset in 1927 when McGovern was elected third man of the county board, though Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock wished to elect their then associate, the Democratic James Houlahan. The plan is in danger again this year because of Barr, backed by McGovern, though professional politicians among Republicans are doing what they can for Lawrence, who is Democratic county chairman.

Henry, in his speech yesterday, declared that Lawrence, though a Democrat, was the agent of Coyne, and "to vote for Lawrence is to put the corrupt, discredited Republican machine back in the saddle. It seems to me that the people of Allegheny County have demonstrated that they do not want Jimmy Coyne in a Commissioner's chair in any form."

SCORES PARTY HERE

Henry continued that he was proud of the Democratic party nationally, but "locally I look with chagrin and disappointment at the so-called Democratic organization in Allegheny County." He added:

"They have been working hand-in-glove with the corrupt Republican machine in order to get for themselves a few of the so-called minority offices.

"I have known both Senator Barr and Mr. Lawrence for 20 years. There can be no comparison as to their respective capacities for the office of County Commissioner. Mr. Barr is eminently fitted for the office. Mr. Lawrence is an absolute misfit."

McGovern, Barr and Frank S. Napierkowski will speak at an Independent rally in West Park, Stowe Township, at 8:30 tonight. An Eighteenth Ward rally will be held at 737 Warrington avenue.

Republican headquarters will begin noon meetings tomorrow, and a night meeting is scheduled tonight for the Seventeenth Ward at 1028 Warrington avenue. Judge Sara Soffel, of County Court, will be the principal speaker.

Forget Party Affiliations, Corbett Urges Voters

Capt. James O. Corbett, speaking at the noon meeting in the Independent party headquarters, Fourth avenue, today urged the county's voters to disregard "major party" lines and elect County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern and C. M. Barr to the majority commissionerships. He said:

"In the recent primary election, after a hard battle, the forces of decency won a victory. But, we have won only an important round in what will be a fight to the finish on the spoils system and fraudulent election in Allegheny County.

"Let us forget party names and affiliations as such and vote for men like Col. McGovern and Senator Barr."

only Pittsburghers should be employed."

KERR TOO BUSY

Kerr, yesterday, said:

"It is impossible at this time to delve into the subject in a thorough manner, because of so many other things occupying the attention of my office. However, there are some things I want to know and later on we will endeavor to make a more thorough probe of the subject."

Kerr said he has been inquiring into various phases of Roy D. Schooley's conduct of the City Treasurer's office, previous to his dismissal Monday, but that the auditors are, at present, too busy for a thorough payroll check.

Richard W. Thompson, appointed to succeed Schooley, as City Treasurer, yesterday was selected as treasurer of the School Board, the bond for the latter office being increased from $50,000 to $250,000 per year.

BURGOYNE STILL MISSING

One of Thompson's first official acts as Treasurer was to dismiss Arthur Burgoyne, special investigator for the Treasury and Schooley aide.

Burgoyne is connected with the affairs in the City Treasury as the man who displayed $125,000 in government bonds to Kerr as security for a city deposit of that amount made by Schooley in the Franklin Savings & Trust Company. Burgoyne has since disappeared and no trace of the bonds has been found.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park meanwhile held action against Burgoyne and Schooley until the results of Kerr's audit are known.

Schooley has been reported ill, at home, with pernicious anemia. Dr. A. W. Crozier said, yesterday:

"I saw Mr. Schooley, at noon, and he was still a sick man. I advised him to go away, but he didn't take very kindly to it. He seems to be a home-loving man.

"I don't know anything about his business—haven't discussed it with him—and don't want to."

Police Here Join Trunk Slayer Hunt

Pittsburgh police and detectives were notified today to be on the lookout for a man and woman, the latter answering the description of Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, wanted by Arizona and California for the murder of two women.

The description said the pair was last seen in an automobile bearing a New York license and one of them carried a California driver's license. The police were asked to forward information to New Jersey state police.

That is a disgrace to Chicago. It ought to be possible to pay those whom the quality and value of future generations depend.

Poverty cannot be offered as an excuse, in a city that since last April has paid to bootleggers, racketeers and gangsters 10 times the amount that it owes the public school teachers.

IN NEW YORK CITY more than two dozen bank directors and others, including the superintendent of banks, have been indicted in connection with the failure of the Bank of United States.

Somebody else should be indicted for allowing the bank to use a name that inspired confidence in hundreds of thousands of depositors, now robbed of their savings. Many of them doubtless assumed that an institution permitted to call itself "Bank of United States" must be sound, and even "official." The use of all names implying a connection with this country, or its government, should be prohibited, especially in connection with financial institutions.

SECOND JURY STARTS VOTE PROBE

Judge Patterson Stresses Importance of Task in Delivering His Charge

The second grand jury investigation of election frauds and thefts opened today as Judge Frank P. Patterson, of Common Pleas Court, delivered a special charge to the October jurors.

He told them:

"No grand jury has had a more important duty than is intrusted to you."

Fifty-eight persons, including high county officials, police officers and members of election boards, already are under indictment on election irregularity charges growing out of the September 15 primary balloting.

Forty-four of them were indicted by the September grand jury which launched its investigation 10 days after the voting.

Fourteen others were indicted by the October jury on charges preferred by individuals or by the Registration Commission.

Judge Patterson's charge bore out the intimation from the District Attorney's office that the scope of the October grand jury investigation will be even wider than that of its predecessor.

In one part of the address, the judge said:

"No persons in Allegheny County, no officer nor otherwise, is so powerful or influential as to successfully ignore your summons. Should any person arrogate to himself the right of refusal to appear, the processes of the court are available to you to enforce attendance, otherwise to be committed for contempt of court."

Other excerpts from Judge Patterson's charge follow:

"We deem it to be the duty of the court to further instruct you as to the primary election laws and violations thereof. Offenses against them go to the very foundation of our government structure, because they are designed to frustrate the honest choice by the electorate of the candidates for public office and to substitute therefor candidates nominated by chicanery, fraud, conspiracy and crime and thereby obviously unfitted for the high fiduciary responsibility of public office.

TAX RECEIPTS

"We are informed that there will come before you certain instances of alleged fraud in the procuring of tax receipts. I call it to your most careful attention.

"There may be instances where the perpetration of fraud has been cunningly concealed, or so intricately involved in the acts of divers persons that to place the finger of guilt upon a single individual becomes impossible and yet it is clear that concerted action of several has combined to effecuate an election fraud.

"To meet such a condition, there is the conspiracy to do an unlawful act."

The jury's first investigation was into rioting and other conditions in the Fifth Ward before and on election day.

David Drexler, county detective, and E. Lowry Humes, secretary of the Registration Commission, then went on the witness stand, the latter bearing five registration books.

Arguments were made this afternoon in the trial of 24 defendants in the Wildwood mine riot case of last June, after three defense witnesses had testified. Forty-three were indicted, but 19 failed to appear.

One man was killed and several injured in the riot.

Thomas Myerscough, Communist party candidate for District Attorney, leader of the striking miners; Mrs. Kitty Priselac and John Chiptulis were the only defendants called to testify. Myerscough admitted he had told Deputy Sheriff William Braun, "To hell with the injunction, and insisted the miners had a right to picket. Mrs. Priselac denied throwing stones. Chipulis denied he went to Wildwood as a picket at the request of William Z. Foster, labor agitator, who had addressed a strikers' meeting at Acmetonia the day previous.

Attorney Jacob Margolis asked the discharge of five defendants because they had not been identified as having participated in the riot.

Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, the two survivors of a famous triumvirate, arrived late yesterday.

Twenty-five thousand persons passed by the bronze casket in the half-light of the laboratory yesterday. Other thousands had preceded them Monday.

There was nationwide response to the suggestion by President Hoover, in a statement yesterday, that all electric lights be turned off for one minute at 10 o'clock Eastern Standard Time tonight—crystallizing the attention of 120,000,000 people upon the vital part in their lives of a single Edison invention.

DYING EDISON FINDS RUBBER SUBSTITUTE

pleted by Fred Ott and Charles Daily, both of them associates of the inventor for more than 50 years. This series was merely a "tieing-up" process.

RACE WITH DEATH

Edison was almost certain he had discovered the process for its manufacture when he took to his bed on October 2 last. He, himself, already had worked out a method of manufacturing latex, the ingredient which fuses the other elements of the synthesis into a practical and durable rubber suitable to commercial use.

But he was not positive. And he was worried. Wistfully, he wished that the successful completion of the invention might be accomplished before death overtook him.

When Edison returned from Florida he already had successfully vulcanized the "golden rod" rubber. But the process was too expensive. There remained the task of making it commercially practicable. This entailed the cheaper manufacture of latex. From his bed, he directed the experiments.

WORK NIGHT AND DAY

Edison had knowledge that his death was approaching. He communicated that knowledge to those around him. He communicated it to Dally and Ott, and his aged associates set themselves to make his wish of seeing synthetic rubber come true. They became voluntary prisoners in the laboratory and worked day and night.

Edison started to sink into a stupor. But Dally and Ott were still pounding doggedly at their experiments. Then, suddenly, the solution flashed out of the mysterious nothingness. One of the experimenters explained:

"It came all of a sudden. We were dead against a stone wall when it flashed upon us. We tested the method, retested it and then telephoned Mr. Edison's home. They told us he was unconscious. But I don't think he was. I think he fell asleep and sent one solution over to us by thought wave. Anyhow, synthetic rubber is commercially practicable."

Perhaps, though, it wasn't too late, for Mrs. Edison, on Friday, reached down into the sinking consciousness of her husband and touched the spark of his dimming intellect by telegraphing in Morse code by pressure on his wrist. Perhaps she sent the message of the success of synthetic rubber and if she did the inventor will know no greater heaven.

Rites on Anniversary Of Invention of Light

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—This is the fifty-second anniversary of the incandescent light—and the funeral day of the man who invented it.

With the first wisps of today's dawn, the body of Thomas Alva Edison was moved from the vine-wreahed laboratory where in life so many masterpieces of his genius were created.

The bronze casket was taken, under escort, to Glenmont, the Edison home, for private funeral services this afternoon. Only the closest friends were invited to join the family, yet the list of mourners numbered more than 400.

The burial at Rosedale Cemetery was, like the service at the home, arranged to avoid ostentation or pomp.

25,000 PASS CASKET

President Hoover, pressed with affairs of state and with preparations for the arrival at Washington tomorrow of the Premier of France, was unable to attend the funeral of his friend. Mrs. Hoover, however, traveled from the capital for the services.

Brisbane Tells Opportunity, Danger of Newspaper Work

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(Universal.)—Arthur Brisbane, editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers, told Columbia University School of Journalism students last night that newspaper work affords "two of the most wonderful opportunities in the world—to be useful and to have power."

Speaking in the second of a series of special lectures, Mr. Brisbane said that it was impossible for a newspaperman to succeed unless he knew a "little about everything." Obviously, he said, a man cannot know all about everything.

He termed newspaper work the most dangerous business, because, in his opinion:

"The longer you're in it and the more you know about it the less your value is apt to be."

He added:

"You must be convinced of what you write and you must not lose interest in your readers, because they are your paymasters."

Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, who also spoke, praised Brisbane as:

JUDGE SCORES O'CONNOR FOR FINE IN ROBBERY CASE

MAGISTRATES TOLD TO HOLD SUSPECTS

Face Misfeasance Charges If They Fail to Follow Laws, Patterson Warns

Judge Frank P. Patterson in Criminal Court today warned police magistrates that unless they stop the practice of disposing of robbery cases by fining defendants instead of holding them for court, the magistrates will be charged with misfeasance in office.

The warning came after Magistrate J. J. O'Connor was called in to explain why he fined Carmen Falki, 21, Whitcomb street, on a charge of having robbed F. Mangen, 72, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

LET OFF WITH FINE

Falki and Carmen Raimondo, 18, of 711 Wylie avenue, were arrested. Raimondo was arraigned before Magistrate Thomas Jones, who held him for court, while Falki was arraigned before O'Connor and fined $15.

Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk caused the court inquiry when he discovered only one defendant was held for trial. O'Connor, with downtown Police Inspector Albert Beebe, appeared before Judge Patterson and explained Falki was fined because they felt it would have been impossible to bring Mangen here as a witness at a trial.

Beebe told the court during the year hundreds of petty robbery cases occur and that invariably the police fine the defendants because the prosecutors are traveling men who would be unable to appear at a court trial.

WARNS MAGISTRATES

Patterson replied by warning the magistrate and inspector that such practice must cease. He said:

"To do this is palpable misfeasance in office. I understand your action, but in the future you must do what the law says. You can't dispose of robbery cases in this way.

"This practice must be stopped. If we have to make informations charging misfeasance in office to do so, we will stop this practice. That will dispose of this case."

Names in Trunk Murders Recall Snyder Case

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—By a coincidence of names, the slaying of two women in Phoenix, Ariz., last Saturday, is linked in many minds with a murder mystery which startled the country four years ago.

For the middle and last names of Winnie Ruth Judd, sought for the Arizona slayings, are the same as the first names of the defendants in the Snyder murder trial here in 1927.

Albert Snyder was beaten to death with a sash weight while he slept, and the persons convicted and electrocuted for the crime were his widow, Ruth Snyder and her corset salesman admirer, Judd Gray.

Man Befriended By Police Their Guest Again

Alphonse Weibinger, of 2144 Lowry street, who North Side police befriended several days ago, furnishing him and his seven children with food, clothing and money, was paying the generous officers there a second visit today.

Weibinger was arrested last night after an automobile he was driving collided with one owned by E. J. Hartman, of 1411 Homewood avenue, parked in Lockhart street.

ROAD 'BLUNDER' TO BE SETTLED AMICABLY

Allegheny River Boulevard Conference Asked; Need For Viaduct Advanced

The Allegheny River boulevard "bungle" will be settled amicably, it was indicated today.

The County Commissioners met yesterday and Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong instructed Assistant Director of Public Works W. H. R. Kreiling to arrange a meeting with the representatives of the Pennsylvania Water Company.

County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher said a tentative agreement submitted to him several days ago was referred back to the company. Quizzing Kreiling, Commissioner Charles C. McGovern asked:

When Kreiling answered in the affirmative, McGovern said:

"The maintenance expense will be awful. It would be better to make some other arrangement. The government might step in there on the harbor line question!"

The viaduct will be necessary to carry the 60-foot width of the boulevard. Due to the blunder alleged by McGovern, it is necessary to narrow the boulevards to 16 feet to pass the water company plant. The only alternative, according to the engineers, is to build the viaduct.

KLINE IN PARLEY ON ECONOMY

Mayor Charles H. Kline called his cabinet together for the first time in several months today, to discuss, among other things, the 1932 tax rate and retrenchment program, planned in all departments.

Before joining the meeting, Public Works Director E. G. Lang announced that the activities of the Bureau of Recreation would be curtailed next year as part of the economy move.

Elimination of band concerts, motion pictures and reduction in the personnel are contemplated, Lang said. Swimming pools will be maintained as well as children's activities. He added:

"The children could not get along without playgrounds. It would be better to cut expenses elsewhere than to deprive them of their summer activities."

POOLING PLAN TO AID RAIL REVENUE

Railroads, Denied Blanket Increase, Face Untried Proposal Made by I. C. C.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Flatly denied permission to raise freight rates 15 per cent, America's railways have before them the new and untried proposal of the Interstate Commerce Commission for pooling moneys derived from surcharges on freight bills to aid the less prosperous lines.

The railroads were left with no apparent alternative but to accept the plan. They were told by the Commission their 15 per cent proposal would be harmful to themselves because of the growing use of trucks and pipe lines. Their executives were directed to submit a plan for handling the pool by December 1 and were informed it could not operate longer than March 31, 1933.

PLAN HELD WORKABLE

The spectacular effort of the carriers, as a whole, was brought to a startling conclusion with announcement late yesterday of the Commission proposal. Railroad men and attorneys had scoffed at the plan when shippers suggested it at hearings. It was unworkable, they said. The Commission, however, today asserted it was workable.

At the same time the Commission outlined the commodities on which it would permit surcharges and the amount of those surcharges. They were limited to a maximum of 10 per cent.

Some commodities, including coal, ores of all kinds and forest products were limited to $3 a carload; some others to $6 a car and still others to one and two cents a 100 pounds. Major farm products—including, wheat, corn, cotton, livestock, and most fresh fruits—are not to be levied against further.

RESPONSIBILITIES SHUNNED

The commission disclaimed any responsibility for keeping the income of the railroads up to the requirements of the New York and other state laws for investment purposes.

A yield from the surcharge plan of between $100,000,000 and $125,000,000 annually on the basis of present traffic was estimated by the commission. This would be pooled and the needs of the carriers unable to earn interest on their bonds cared for. Then the remainder would be returned to the more prosperous roads on the basis of the amounts paid in.

Coal Men Here to Discuss Rail Rate Increase

Discussion of the full effect of the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of the carriers for a freight rate increase of 15 per cent will soon be made an order of business of the members of the Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau, it was stated today.

Coal operators of the Pittsburg district were opposed to a flat increase of 15 per cent on the ground that the district would lose heavily by such a decision. The commission did not grant such an increase, but raised rates $3 a car on anthracite and bituminous shipments.

Renaldo Arrested On Wife's Charge

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Duncan Renaldo, film actor, was arrested yesterday on a telegraphic warrant from New York City charging abandonment, but was soon released.

The District Attorney's office refused to issue a complaint against him on the ground that Mrs. Renaldo, who brought about his arrest through a New York grand jury indictment, faces an insanity charge in Los Angeles County.

fidence in the innocence of his daughter. He said:

"I am worried, of course, but I know that my daughter could not be involved in such an affair."

BROTHER'S LETTER

The minister's son, however, last night wrote a letter to his parents which read:

"Dear folks, I suppose the greatest catastrophe imaginable has come across our lives. Ruth is accused of a great crime. Circumstantial evidence seems to be against her. She has told me nothing and I want to know nothing unless she is caught by the law and gives herself up and is brought to trial. I want you, Mom, to go back through letters you have of Ruth's which would be evidence to show her insanity. Many of the letters are incoherent and contradictory. The girl is mentally off balance, I am sure."

SUSPECT FREED

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Mrs. Inez Gillum, 25, arrested here early this morning after she and a car containing two men endeavored to outrace a deputy sheriff's car and when it was found she fitted the description of Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, was released two hours later on orders of the Los Angeles police department.

Mr. McKinnell

It developed that Mrs. Gillum had been questioned by police at San Pedro before she left there. She definitely established her identity by her dental work. Mrs. Judd has a gold tooth whereas Mrs. Gillum has none.

The two men with her were B. N. Gillum, her husband, and O. A. Guess. They were en route to Las Vegas, Nev., after a short visit in San Pedro.

EXPRESSMAN TALKS

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Details of the transfer of a "terribly heavy" trunk for Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd have been related by Richard M. Swartz to assist in solution of the murder of Miss Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes Leroi.

Swartz told investigators he was called to the Leroi-Samuelson apartment.

Swartz said he found the apartment in darkness. At the door was a woman he later identified from a photograph as Mrs. Judd. She said:

"I want this trunk taken to the station."

Swartz stumbled over the threshold as he entered. The woman said:

"I'm sorry, I'm going away and have had the lights turned off. You'll have to get along as best as you can in the dark."

She led him to the rear of the apartment, and pointed out a big trunk. He was unable to lift it. He asked:

"What is in that to make it so heavy?"

"Books."

Swartz summoned two friends and they dragged the trunk out. Mrs. Judd clicked the door and then exclaimed she had locked her keys inside. Swartz took the screen off the bathroom window, which was open, and crawled in. He admitted Mrs. Judd through the front door.

LIGHT STORY FALSE

Mrs. Judd, he said, went to the bathroom to close the window and dropped her keys. With an exclamation, she pushed the light switch and the lights came on. Swartz said he was surprised, but that Mrs. Judd said nothing, swooped up the keys and went out.

He informed Mrs. Judd he could not take the trunk to the railroad station unless she would accompany it, since it was apparent the weight charge upon it would be excessive.

She then told him to take it to 1130 Brill street, her home. Police learned the same trunk, in company with a smaller one, was taken to the railroad station Sunday by H. U. Grimm, owner of the apartment, at the request of Mrs. Judd for shipment to Los Angeles.

Officers were unable to agree that Mrs. Judd accomplished the crime alone, nor could they fasten upon a plausible accomplice.

The suspect's clinic superiors here asserted she "was not capable" of the act with which she is charged, although to attempt to help someone out of a serious difficulty would be "just like her."

RECALL 1922 CASE

OLNEY, Ill., Oct. 21.—(INS.)—The nation-wide search for Mrs. Winnifred Ruth Judd, suspected slayer of Agnes Ann Leroi, a nurse, andHedvig Samuelson, a school teacher, today brought to light another sensational case in 1922, in which Mrs. Judd, then Ruth McKinnell, was a figure.

The girl, at the time a high school student at Olney, was found unclad in a hayloft of a local minister's barn after disappearing for several days, and charged that two men had abducted her.

She was considered at that time a neurasthenic, and a letter she wrote to the mother of a young man showed a fanciful mind. She had been a student of the Free Methodist College at Greenville, Ill., the year previous to her abduction.

DIX, GROCER'S DAUGHTER, WED

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Forsaking a pretentious Hollywood ceremony for one in the small desert town of Yuma, Ariz., Richard Dix, film actor, yesterday married Miss Winifred Coe, daughter of a retired San Francisco wholesale grocer.

The couple today was reported honeymooning in Southern California, but the place was not ascertained.

Dix, whose real name is Ernest Carlton Brimmer, gave his age as 27 and Miss Coe as 23 in taking out the marriage license. In the party which left for Yuma by plane were several relatives of both bride and bridegroom.

The romance between Dix and Miss Coe began four years ago at a dinner party. Their betrothal was announced this week.

RICH DIVORCEE, 68, WEDS AGENT

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 21.—(INS.)—A romance between a 68-year-old millionairess and a 29-year-old automobile salesman came to light today with the revelation that Mrs. Sarah V. Brown, Evanston's richest woman, had eloped with Harry C. Wils.

The romance began when Wils called at Mrs. Brown's mansion and tried to sell her a car. Today the newlywed Mrs. Brown-Wils disclosed that she had purchased a car—for her husband. It was her third marriage. Her second husband, Jack Deynzer, a bath curtain manufacturer, paved the way for a divorce when he objected to driving a gold-handled pink sedan presented to him by Mrs. Brown-Wils.

PENNA. REALTY BROKERS MEET IN POCONOS

By EDWARD GOSS
Real Estate Editor.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Oct. 21.—The eleventh annual convention of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association was opened at Skytop Lodge, near here, today by J. W. Cree, Jr., president of the association and Pittsburgh realtor.

Cree, heading the Pittsburgh delegation of real estate brokers, welcomed delegates to the annual conference and enumerated the various subjects up for discussion. In his welcoming address Cree proved optimistic over the present condition of the real estat: market throughout the state.

PITTSBURGHERS ACTIVE

Among the 35 realtors representing Pittsburgh many will play active parts in the three-day convention program. L. W. Monteverde, vice president of the Real Estate Company of Pittsburgh, is scheduled to lead a discussion on "The Buhl Foundation" and also give a talk on "Sales Experience."

L. T. Stevenson, president-elect of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and a member of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, will also be active. Among other Pittsburgh realtors who are placed on the program are R. T. Mackintosh, vice president of the Pittsburgh board; Robert W. Semenow, director of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Brokers' License Law, and C. C. C. Stotler, secretary-treasurer of the Title Guaranty Company.

SPEECH CONTEST TONIGHT

Mackintosh will serve on the resolutions committee during the convention. Semenow is listed for a talk entitled "Administration of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Act." Stotler will preside at the "home town speech contest" scheduled for this evening. The speech contest, a yearly feature, was won last year by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, represented by Stotler. A dance will follow the speech contest tonight.

Among the more prominent subjects which will be discussed tomorrow and Friday will be taxation, the proposed national central mortgage bank and property upkeep. The convention will close Friday afternoon.

Ferocious Lunatic Only Man With Toothache

OTTAWA, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—The wild man raging through the bush of Northern British Columbia wasn't so ferocious after all. He only had a toothache.

Word reached the Liard post of the Royal Canadian Mounted that a lunatic was wandering the wilderness living the life of a wild thing.

Two corporals were sent to investigate. They found the "lunatic" to be Charlie Carlson, a trapper they knew as a sane, industrious citizen. He opened his mouth and disclosed two throbbing teeth, each a couple of inches long, growing along the roof of his mouth.

In a territory where dental surgery is unknown, Carlson had suffered for 12 months, losing most of his normal sleep because of the pain. The troopers pulled the teeth.

'IN-LAWS' STORY GETS DIVORCE

Too much mother-in-law and sister-in-law helped to break up the wedded life of Frances L. Deere, 200 North Elizabeth street, Hazelwood, according to her testimony before Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Common Pleas Court. The Judge granted her a divorce from Edmond J. Deere, 2737 Philadelphia avenue, Dormont, on grounds of cruelty and indignities.

They were married November 29, 1928, and Deere left her in March, 1930, coming home in her absence and taking many household articles, including all their wedding presents, she testified. She said her husband brought his mother and sister to live with him and a month after their marriage they began to make trouble for her.

SWIMMER GOES HEROIC

Johnny Weissmuller to Play Title Role in M-G-M's 'Tarzan of the Apes'

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 21.

Discarding his bathing suit for a leopard's skin, Johnny Weissmuller, swimming star, will play Edgar Rice Burrough's fabulous hero, "Tarzan."

After taking tests of everybody but Bull Montana, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer finally has signed Johnny for the picture, with an option on more to come. Thus the aquatic star cashes in on his recent nose-straightening operation. It will mark his debut as an actor, although he previously has appeared in several swimming shorts (no pun intended).

Johnny Weissmuller

Directing "Tarzan of the Apes" will be W. S. Van Dyke, the studio expert on out-of-door pictures.

THEIR FRIENDSHIP ENDED

Al Boasberg tells about the producer of a Broadway flop who gave an out-of-town friend tickets to the show.

The next day he met the friend on the street.

"Well, how did you like it?" he asked.

"Very well," said the friend, "only I don't think you ought to have had that brass rail around the audience."

"Brass rail!" shouted the producer. "That wasn't the audience. That was the orchestra."

The Paul Porcasis have a new baby boy. . . . Comes a letter from Dorothy Sebastian in Vancouver. She and Bill have been salmon fishing. . . . No profit there. . . . Maurice Chevalier has Lilyan Tashman's dressing room at Paramount. . . . Maybe it's not news back East, but I hadn't heard until today about Gary Cooper's countess. . . . Herman Mankiewicz claims to be the only man who ever resigned from being a supervisor. He says he can't afford any new enemies.

HOLLYWOOD BY NIGHT

Maybe you don't care for puzzles, but I like to speculate on the couples at premieres.

Seen at the opening of "Consolation Marriage": . . . Joan Bennett, walking about now with a cane, and attended by Hugh Trevor. . . . Sister Constance and the Marquis in the same party. . . . Buddy Rogers and Ricardo Cortez, stagging. . . . In Irene Dunne's party were her mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Le Baron, Myles Connolly and Leo Carrillo. . . . Mary Brian with Ken Murray (where was Russell Gleason?). . . . Edna May Oliver and Franklin Pangborn. . . . Mary Astor, making her first public appearance with her new husband, Dr. Thorpe. . . . Nick Stuart alone. (Sue is in New York.) . . . Richard Dix, again with the daughter of Senator Cole. . . . Tay Garnett alone (he says Patsy Ruth will escape an operation after all). . . . Ann Harding and, of course, Harry Bannister. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Clark Gable (the autograph hunters almost mobbed him.)

Many Nationalities Give 'Color' to Scene

Nearly four hundred atmosphere players were assembled from the nooks and crannies for the colorful cafe scenes directed by Robert Z. Leonard. There were Spaniards, Chinese, Lascars, Cubans, Negros, West Indians, Portugese, Germans, Russians, Mexicans, Filipinos, Swedes, Senegalese, Hindus, Malayans, Tahitians, Hawaiians, Italians and French.

Ken Maynard Explains Why Cowboys Sing

Much has been written glorifying the singing cowboy, but no explanation given as to why they sing. Ken Maynard tells the psychology of the song of the plain.

"All herdsmen realize the influence of the music on cows," Ken claims. "The first thing a ranch hand learns is never to allow fear to creep into his voice when singing, as it will cause a stampede among cattle. Cows will follow quietly while they are being sung to, but they become restless and hard to guide when the songs stops."

In Case
(From "City Child")

Lean is his cheek and sharp his eye,
And, oh, how sharp it takes my breath;
Each time I see him passing by
I think that it will be my death:
Each time he passes by, I wait,
And smooth my dress and hope he'll mark
My fingers' whiteness on the gate,
Or note my hair's unruffled dark.

Yesterday's day was nearly spent
The while I lingered for his coming.
Oh, right enough, he came, and went,
Nor slowed his step, nor ceased his humming.
If he should pass today, I swear
I'll waste no glance upon his face!

This ribbon braided in my hair?
I only tied it there, in case . . . .

They Would

Speaking of idea burglars, someone recalled the Rice Brothers, well known vaudevillians, who borrowed their jokes for their act from anybody and everybody who had anything funny.

One day they entered a small-time theater in the Mid-West and read a huge sign posted near the stage entrance. The sign urged actors not to tell the listed jokes because they were old and had been used there.

The Rice Brothers looked over the list and out of it—got a brand new act!

Add Similes

S. Weiss: As one sided as a painting . . . Courtney Dunkel: Unhappy as a fly in a glass of near-beer.

A Bit of a Critic

It happened as the second act curtain fell on a new flop show the other premiere night. Howard L. Snyder, who paid to go in, was making his exit.

He paused at the box office and grumbled to the treasurer:

"What's playing here tomorrow night?"

Merciless Fact

Raymond Moore, the botany professor, who produced the play, "Ladies of Creation," is new to Broadway. He was complaining of a stiff neck.

"Nope," he noped, "from looking for audiences."

Dear Old Cleveland

"Dear Walter," writes Eddie Vogt, the actor, now on tour, "if anyone should ask you what became of the old-fashioned gag about the tramp asking a Chinee laundryman for something to eat—and the Chinee said: 'You like fish?' and the tramp said: 'Yes,' and the replay was, 'Then come around next Flidee!'—tell him it was in the Cleveland News on October 15."

Novelette

About a fortnight ago there appeared in the book stalls a new tome by Edmund S. Whitman called "No Minor Vices." It is a rather heated book about life along the Caribbean, which slipped by while the censors were dozing.

In it is a character named Barnstable, who is guilty of plenty. The original Barnstable is the superintendent of a great banana plantation in Honduras. Ten days ago he came north and married a sweet girl in Maine. They honeymooned here, where she came across a copy of the book, recognized her hubby as Barnstable. (He had not confessed his sins.)

She took the next train home and started divorce proceedings. The husband now threatens to sue the author for alienation of affections.

Heheheh

When Burns and Allen, now at the Palace, were known as Burns and Lorraine, Lorraine was sensitive about his stuttering. Rather than let anyone know he stuttered he wouldn't answer.

After a long lay-off a booking agent phoned Lorraine:

"I can give you boys three days in Newark next week, okay!"

The excited Lorraine merely nodded yes.

Broadway Banter

Irvin O'Dunn relays this overheard repartee between two hams.

First: "What kind of an act are you doing this year?"
Second: "Comedy act."
First: "I mean, what sort of character?"
Second: "Oh, I'm doing a genteel bum."
First: "I catch on. You're working in street clothes."

The Right Answer

The Marx Brothers were offered a week's engagement at the Roxy Theater the other day.

"I can get you boys $15,000 for the week," said the booking agent.

Origin?

One of the above mentioned Rice boys, it appears, was really a devoted son-in-law. He worshiped his wife's mother. While playing in a Southern city he got word that she passed away. He was grief-stricken and urged the manager to let him out of his contract. The manager refused.

That night Rice limped on the stage. He had tears in his eyes as he said to the audience:

"My heart is leaden.. I feel awful, not funny. My mother-in-law just died."

The robust laughter that interrupted his mournful talk lasted a minute.

They kept the "bit" in their act, so funny did it strike their listeners; thus the "origin" of the mother-in-law joke.

Nifty

In the beautifully mounted and delightfully orchestrated "Cat and the Fiddle" show there is only one funny quip.

Lawrence Grossmith tells Odette Myrtil that his face is only good for cocktails and neuralgia.

Duquesne University Night in Stanley

Tonight is to be Duquesne University's night in the Stanley, where "The Spirit of Notre Dame" is now in its last two days. Headed by their band, the students will parade to the theater. Lew Ayres, Sally Blane and J. Farrell MacDonald and the original "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame are in the cast of the film.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

From this point, it appears that the next attraction in the Nixon will be Earl Carroll's "Vanities," new annual edition, booked for the week of November 2. Because there will be no bill next week, the box office sale of seats for the Carroll fiesta of girlish beauty will open next Monday. The festooning of comedy will be in the hands of such adept festooners as Herb Williams, Jack Benny and Chaz Chase.

The Alvin Theater, through a quick change in bookings, will have Clark & McCullough in the musical comedy, "Here Comes The Bride," as the atraction next week. Seats will be on sale in the box office tomorrow for this production, based on life in the Reno divorce colony. The book was written by Peter Arno, the comic artist. The Alvin also is looking forward to the appearance, November 2, of Mme. Schumann-Heink in a revival of the Gilbert & Sullivan light opera gem, "The Mikado," in which she has the comedy role of Katisha.

Small Timer says some boys who were sitting pretty some time ago are just standing round now, wishing they hadn't let swell times go to their heads.

"Shine On Harvest Moon," revived by Ruth Etting in the "Follies," was written for Nora Bayes by Jack Norworth 20 years or more ago. Its new popularity has increased considerably the royalty Mr. Norworth garners. Jack is in the fillums now, doing the "Naggers" series of short comedies.

Vicki Baum Will Adapt Her Play to Screen

Vicki Baum, distinguished German author, and editor of Germany's foremost fashion magazine, Der Dame, has been signed to a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract. She has been engaged to work on the motion picture adaptation of "Grand Hotel," the stage success based on her novel of the same title. Edmund Goulding will direct the new picture.

New Zasu Pitts Comedy At Roach Studios

Production is scheduled to begin immediately at the Hal Roach studios on a new Zasu Pitts-Thelma Todd comedy, as yet untitled. The story has a "Coney Island" atmosphere and portrays the popular comediennes in a series of amusing incidents in and around the concessions that thrive at a metropolitan beach resort.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Unsung New Yorkers

WHEN PATROLMAN BROWN was killed in a battle with three holdup men, Mrs. Brown was somewhat comforted by the fact that her young son was the very image of his late father. Although Tommy was but 10 years of age, he was a manly sort of a kid and was extremely well liked around the neighborhood. The folks all said that he was just like his father and would undoubtedly be a member of the force some day.

Strangely enough, that was Mrs. Brown's wish, too. Just why she wanted her boy in an occupation that had killed the man she loved is one of those things I know nothing about. The fact remains that this was a mother whose happiest moment would arrive when she saw her son in a patrolman's uniform.

She might have married again. Still young and attractive, there were several men in the vicinity who would have been only too happy to make her burden a little lighter. But she would have none of it. If the truth be told, I think she was afraid that such a union would lessen the great companionship between Tommy and herself.

So she worked like the devil for this boy. It was the toughest kind of work. Scrubbing floors when it was necessary and washing things for the neighbors. An odd job here and an odd job there. Anything at all that would bring in a little money to enable Tommy to go on with his schooling. And all an investment that would pay off when Tommy was given his shield.

When the boy was 16 he very calmly informed his mother that he was through with school. She asked him to continue. She insisted that she could provide for a long while yet and told him that a further education would help him greatly. But Tommy refused.

"Nothing doing, mom," he asserted. "You've done all for me that you're going to do. Now it's my turn. We both knew that I'm going to join the force, but I'm not going to have you support me until I'm old enough to take the examination. Not by a long shot.

"I don't know what kind of a job I'll be able to land, but whatever it is will fill in very nicely until I'm of age. I know I can earn enough to have us both get along."

"But, Tommy," his mother began, "I don't think——"

He stopped her with a kiss.

"You're not supposed to think any more, mom," he stated. "From now on, I'm the head of this house. You be a good mother and do as your son says. Tomorrow, I start work."

The years slipped rapidly by, as years have a habit of doing. Before either mother or son quite realized it, Tommy was eligible for the patrolman's examination. With a song in his heart the boy went through his test. Then he returned to his home and told his mother that he was certain he had passed.

Mrs. Brown's happiness knew no bounds. Her dream was coming true at last. God was good. God was kind. He had seen fit to take her man away, but He had replaced him with another man who was just as fine.

In a few weeks news arrived from the Civil Service Commission. It was blunt, harsh news. It was a definite blasting of the highest hopes. Tommy had failed to pass.

You can imagine this woman's feelings and you can marvel at the fact that she displayed none of them to her boy. Instead she comforted him—and assured him the first examination didn't mean a thing.

"There's plenty of time, son," she smiled. "And don't you be looking as though you lost your last friend. You'll study a little harder, you'll take the next examination and you'll pass big. We can't show the neighbors that we're feeling blue. Because we're not, Tommy.

"Let's go to a movie, son. Greta Garbo's playing right around the corner. Come on, boy. Forget it. The next examination will be a cinch for you."

She was wrong. The next test was just as much a stumbling block for the boy as the first one had been. Once more he failed. And once more, even though her heart was like a ton of lead, it was up to Mrs. Brown to help her boy.

It was more difficult this time. He had but one more chance. If he didn't come through on the third occasion, he would never be able to become a policeman. And something told his mother that this was the thing that was going to happen.

I find it hard to explain this woman's emotions. Her son, you will point out, held a fairly decent job and was easily able to support himself and his mother. What difference, then, whether he landed on the force or whether he got his living somewhere else?

It was all in the point of view. Ever since the night that her patrolman husband had been killed in line of duty she had cherished the thought that Tommy would take up where his father had been compelled to stop short. She had slaved for the thought; she had devoted everything to the one ambition. And now, for some cruel reason, she was being robbed of her reward.

While her son was taking his third examination she sat at home and prayed fervently that he might be successful. The answer arrived some weeks later when Tommy was at work. With trembling fingers she tore open the letter. A low moan escaped her lips. It was all over. The boy had failed on his final chance.

"Merciful God," she breathed. "How am I going to tell the boy?"

The mother was spared that ordeal—but she was spared it by taking a blow that was far more severe. As Tommy was returning from work that night he ran into a holdup man who was backing out of a grocery store. He grappled with the thief. Two shots rang out—and Tommy fell to the ground with bullets in his body.

But the holdup man fell with him. Even though the boy was dying he held his man until a policeman arrived. Then he gave up. Before the ambulance had reached the hospital Tommy was dead.

He never did know the result of that final examination . . .

The newspapers made Tommy a hero and a purse was collected for his mother. The Police Commissioner was to present it to her on a certain afternoon. And at the appointed hour Mrs. Brown stood before the head man of the police force.

She was strangely calm. It was the sort of numbness that only a great shock can produce. Dressed in deep mourning, she held tight to her little bag and listened to the Commissioner as he talked on. In that bag were the various things that women carry. And in addition, ironically enough, there was Tommy's last rejection from the Civil Service Commission. She had carried it with her since his death.

The Commissioner handed her the money that had been collected. He shook her hand warmly.

"Your son was a grand boy," were his concluding words. "He would have made a wonderful policeman."

Lecturer Shows Outbreak in Spain

The stirring days following the time when Alfonso XIII left the throne of Spain were presented in picture and story by E. M. Newman in the second of his season's "travelogues" at the Carnegie Music Hall last night.

The excitement of the Spanish people, the parading and celebrations, the destructive work of the mobs, many of these scenes were shown. Views taken in the homes of Cervantes, El Greco and others gave the lecture an intimate quality. Next Tuesday night Mr. Newman will present "The New Berlin."

LEAGUE DOUBTS U. S. BACKING

GENEVA, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—There was a distinct note of pessimism this evening among persons in a position to know the trend of debate regarding Manchuria in the League of Nations council, and the belief was widespread that the United States, represented by Prentiss B. Gilbert, was not backing up the league's program of pacification.

Reports of conversations at Washington between Secretary of State Stimson and Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese ambassador, appeared to have aroused fears that the United States was playing a lone hand and short-circuiting the council's efforts to induce withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria.

At the same time Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's representative on the council, remained adamant in his refusal to promise recall of Japanese troops without certain guarantees which it is believed China is unwilling to undertake.

It was understood the members of the council were very much discouraged and that they were considering adjourning this extraordinary session before the end of the week without taking any definite action on the Manchurian problem.

SLUMP HELPFUL IN FORD VIEW

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—The present business situation is termed "a wholesome thing, in general," by Henry Ford in an interview in the American Automobile, published today. The manufacturer said:

"The depression*has done less harm to the people and the country than a continuance of our previous false prosperity would have done.

"More people will survive this period than would have survived a continuance of the former period. Our so-called prosperity was not prosperity in any sense. It did great harm to business and to the morale of the people.

"The depression will be broken when (1) people cease to believe that something can be obtained for nothing; (2) when the people get back their self-dependence; that is, when they cease to lean on the initiative of a few either to provide work or charity and (3) when the public understanding is capable of seeing that the profit of life is life and not money."

RAID ON HOME UPHELD

Dry agents were upheld in raiding a so-called private residence where liquor was alleged to have been sold even though they made no purchases, by Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal Court today.

The court denied the petition of Agostino Ocerra, of 912 North Lang avenue, for suppression of the liquor seized as evidence against him.

The agents testified they had seen beer, wine and whisky in the place though they did not buy any.

The decision is the first in Pittsburgh since Prohibition Commissioner W. W. Woodcock ordered agents to make raids without purchases of liquor and without search warrants if there was other evidence of dry law violations.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

The Drama League chose an incomparable Indian summer day for the tea it gave yesterday afternoon in the Hotel Schenley. The guests of honor were Walter Hampden and Fay Bainter, who are appearing at the Nixon this week in "The Admirable Crichton," and Lennox Robinson, the Irish playwright, who'll direct the Irish players here the week of November 2 at the Twentieth Century Club and Carnegie Hall.

The debs of 1931 were asked to usher, and a most attractive group they are. Rita Bornfraeger wore a notably smart gown of dark russet brown crepe with a bolero jacket of vivid green having a scarf of baby leopard. Her turban was of brown felt.

Gowns Charming

Lucretia Billings chose a striking gown of Spanish tile crepe with a diagonal bodice trimming in white. Blonde Elizabeth Robinson appeared in a charming gown of red crepe with mink banding the short sleeves and the peplum of the skirt.

Betty Kennedy chose red crepe, too, and Katherine Frazer was in beige crepe with long full sleeves. She chose a smart little hat of brown velvet.

Mrs. William Maclay Hall, who chose a black costume, Mrs. H. Allen Machesney and Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby were asked to pour.

Among the debut dates just taken is November 12 when the Harry B. Higginses, of Sewickley, will present their daughter, Betty. They will give a tea that day in their Sewickley home.

Tuesday Musical Club Honors 19th President

More than 500 women and here and there a man or two attended the reception given in Upper Memorial Hall yesterday by the Tuesday Musical Club for its nineteenth president, Mrs. Elmer W. Flaccus. Receiving with the honor guests were the board of governors and several of the past presidents, including Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, Mrs. H. Talbot Peterson, Mrs. Arthur B. Siviter, Mrs. T. C. Donovan, Mrs. W. C. Dierks, Mrs. F. F. Rohrer and Mrs. Will Earhart. Mrs. Flaccus was most becomingly gowned in black velvet and cream lace with a small black hat. At her shoulder she wore the club's gift of gardenias.

The program, which was given by Miss Georgia Orwig, pianist, one of the club's active members, was distinguished for its brilliance of execution. In its entirety the program, including Liszt, Debussy, Griffes, Ibert and Schubert compositions, was given with fine understanding, especially in the Schubert "Du bist die Ruh."

During the tea hours, places at the two long tables were exchanged from time to time by the honorary members, Mrs. Charistian I. McKee (founder of the club), Mrs. Daniel M. Clemson, Mrs. James Stephen Martin, Miss Adele Reahard, Mrs. Jessie W. Rose, granddaughter of Stephen Collins Foster, and these special active members, Mrs. E. E. Baker, Mrs. Edwin M. Ruud, Mrs. R. B. Savage, Miss Amanda Vierheller, Mrs. Charles H. Barnard, Mrs. Rhinehart Mayer and Miss Helen Steinert.

Serve at Tables

The tables, covered with Belgian filet, were most attractive with centerpieces of dahlias in an exceptionally lovely combination of burnished gold and bronze browns. The pourers place cards were clever little dahlias, made and painted by Mrs. Henrietta Hibbard. The entire front of the auditorium was decorated also, palms, ferns and baskets of autumn flowers forming a background for the receiving line. Congratulatory messages were received from Miss Julia Morgan Harding and Mrs. Charles B. McLean, both past presidents, and Mrs. Kate DeNormandie Wilson.

NEW CHAPTER OF KOMIC CLUB ORGANIZED

Magician Will Entertain At Lawrenceville Branch Meeting on Saturday

Still another chapter of the Warner Theaters-Sun Telegraph Junior Komic Club has been organized. The new group is made up of children of the Lawrenceville district, who will hold their regular meetings in th Plaza Theater. About 600 children were present when Manager John Morin, Jr., announced some of the treats and entertainment in store for members.

Of particular interest was the announcement, that Tampa the magician, sponsored by the Hanky Baking Company, would attend the meeting of the Plaza Chapter at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon and put on a free show for members only.

Prizes were awarded and officers elected. These boys and girls will conduct meetings of the chapter on the stage of the Plaza Theater for the next four weeks: Grand jester, Mary Lavery; board of governors, Bida Bush, Olive Wintner, Raymond Curley, John Falotta and Eileen Lavery.

PHOTOS TO BE TAKEN

Within the next week, photographs will be made of the officers elected in each chapter. Watch the Sun-Telegraph daily for announcements along these lines.

The first to be printed is the picture to be taken at the Manor Theater, Saturday afternoon at 1:30. At that time Bernard Mayer, Cecil Becker, George Seewald, Isabel Frank, Bill Goldsmith, Benny Weintraub and Arthur Goldburg, elected to office at the last meeting, are asked to report to Manager Blowitz. The picture will be taken before the meeting begins.

The fact that "date of birth" appears on the application blank for membership in the club has aroused curiosity. As previously announced, Warner Theaters and the Sun-Telegraph had a definite purpose in mind when asking for this information. Just as soon as the stacks and stacks of new cards can be arranged, a birthday list will be published daily.

Not only will the names of members appear in the column of their birthdays, but each boy and girl will receive special recognition from the stage of his or her neighborhood theater and will receive, through the mail, a birthday card and a surprise.

NOVELTY FEATURES

In addition to the entertainment features, including a special picture for children and the regular program of the day, several boys and girls at each of the chapters will receive, next Saturday morning, one of those comfortable, snappy looking fleece-lined coats. Ping Pong sets are to be distributed at some chapters, magic maps at others. Each chapter has its own particular surprise.

FLAG BUTTONS

Here's a chance to get a set of 16 pretty buttons showing the flags of all nations. Every child attending a meeting at the Harris, Diamond street, and Enright, will receive one button, bearing a flag and a serial number. When you have collected a complete set of 16, a prize will be given. There is no ruling against exchanging buttons, or using other means to get the complete set. Buttons will be distributed at all chapters soon.

There is plenty of fun ahead and any boy or girl who is not enrolled may become a member by signing the blank on this page and mailing to the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

TRADE-IN TIME IS HERE

OUR Big Fall Appraisal Campaign Is Now Going On

NEVER AGAIN will your car be worth as much as RIGHT NOW on a new Hudson Eight or a new Essex Super-Six . . . . .

LOOK—at these Generous Allowances

During 1931 there has been such a steadily increasing demand for previous Hudson and Essex models—and the cost of reconditioning such cars has been so low due to their rugged construction and built-in long life—that these models are now bringing higher prices. Consequently, these factors and our big Fall Appraisal Campaign permit us to give extraordinary, liberal trade-in allowances. For example—

Hudson

1928—We are allowing as high as $350 on some models of the 1928 series.

1929—Now in big demand. Our trade-in price as high as $600 on some body types.

1930—Some cars in the 1930 series are being taken in as high as $750.

Essex

1928—On many cars we are giving as high as $250 on trade-ins.

1929—Our price is as high as $400 allowance on a new Hudson or Essex.

1930—Trade-in allowance as high as $500 on some body styles.

GET OUR APPRAISAL TODAY!

Right now you can do one of two things—spend a lot of money on your present car fixing it up to drive this winter or you can take advantage of the maximum trade-in value of your car by buying a new Hudson 8 or Essex Super-Six during this Fall Appraisal Campaign.

Every dollar you spend on your present car is just so much thrown away as far as the trade-in value of your car is concerned. And the longer you keep your car, the less it will be worth when you do trade it in.

Trade-in time is here right now. Regardless of what make of car you are now driving, come in and get our appraisal. We will allow you the full buying power of your present car on any Hudson or Essex model in our stock.

This includes the beautiful new De Luxe models as well as standard body types. At slight additional cost you can have Selective Free Wheeling and the Hudson-Essex "Startix" which automatically starts your motor and restarts it anytime, anywhere should it stall for any reason.

HUDSON ESSEX

Don't delay! This offer is limited to a very short time only. Come in to-day and get our allowance on your present car.

YORKTOWN FETE STAMP ON SALE

The Yorktown postage stamps, issued by the Postoffice Department in commemoration of the British surrender to Washington at Yorktown, 150 years ago, were placed on sale yesterday at the Pittsburgh Postoffice. Only a limited number are being sold to one person, as all the 1,150 third and fourth class postoffices in Western Pennsylvania received their quota from 250,000 stamps sent to the Pittsburgh Postoffice. The entire issue was 25,000,000 for distribution throughout the country.

They are larger than regular stamps and three portraits on them depict Gen. George Washington, Gen. Rochambeau, the French commander who fought at his side at Yorktown, and Comte de Grasse, head of the French fleet that played a conspicuous part in the victory of the revolutionary force at Yorktown. Over the portraits is inscribed "1781—Yorktown—1931."

DEBATE INVITED BY SOCIALISTS

William Adams and William J. Van Essen, Socialist candidates for County Commissioner, have issued a challenge to their opponents to debate what the Socialists consider the issues of the present campaign, at a mass meeting to be held in Taylor Allderdice High School next Monday evening.

The subjects suggested for debate are unemployment insurance, moratorium on taxes for unemployed small property owners as long as they remain unemployed, the question of the county undertaking its own building projects.

Those invited to debate with the Socialists are Senator William D. Mansfield and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, Republican candidates; C. M. Barr, Independent; David Lawrence, Democrat, and Louis Alpern, Liberal. Each is promised as much time as he requires, and "the utmost consideration."

TWO IN BEGGING 'RACKETS' HELD

A youth, who is charged with obtaining money from Pittsburgh business men by posing as a friend of their relatives and a woman, who is accused of soliciting money under the guise of charity were held for further hearings when arraigned today before Magistrate T. D. Jones in Central Police Court. They are John Leonard, 18, of Washington, Pa., and Mrs. Emma West, 45, a Negro, of 1520 Cliff street.

Detectives charge Leonard called upon business men, telling them he knew certain relatives, naming aunts or uncles from out of town. He would then ask for money. The West woman testified in court that she, along with 25 other Negro women, had been engaged by a man named Williams to collect money and that she was permitted to keep what she needed. Detectives are seeking Williams.

AIRPORT LIGHT FUND BLOCKED

Two hours after County Commissioners C. C. McGovern and E. V. Babcock had voted to transfer $88,000 to buy radio and lighting equipment for the City-County Airport late yesterday, McGovern and Chairman J. G. Armstrong rescinded the action, it developed today.

Armstrong, who was not present when the original action was approved, returned later and protested that the money should be used to employ labor rather than purchase equipment. The money was part of an appropriation of $300,000 from the general fund recently to provide work for the unemployed. C. W. Forcier, manager of the airport, was asked to submit a new list of needed items.

JUMP FROM BED IN MORNING AND DRINK WATER

Italian Doctors Working Wonders on Headache and Stomach Sufferers With Simple, Internal Bathing

Why is it that eight out of every ten people today are being made miserable, unhappy and inefficient by constant headaches?

Italian doctors startled the world by giving plain effervescent water before breakfast as the remedy. A homely treatment, but effective sometimes beyond belief. A form of intestinal bathing that makes anemic-looking, pasty-faced, headachy and stomach-acidity people take on new life, new appearance and new health.

The way the treatment works is on the same principle of washing out the intestines every morning before breakfast just like you wash dirt off your face and hands. For just as it is necessary to clean ashes from a furnace before a fire burns bright and clear, so it is necessary to wash out the stomach BEFORE food goes into it.

Otherwise you most likely cause a bad condition by mixing the food you eat with ptomaine-like accumulations in the stomach that virtually poison the fresh foods you put in it.

For that reason, every man or woman—whether sick or well—is advised to drink each morning BEFORE BREAKFAST, one-half glass of water with two tablespoons of ordinary Italian brioschi effervescent in it, followed by a large glass of plain water. That's the whole Italian treatment tens of thousands of people are crediting with near-miracles in the relief of constant headaches, sour stomach, acidity, constipation, "bilious" attacks and general lassitude and debility.

The Italian brioschi effervescent to put with water can be obtained in large cans at any store for a few cents. The way to pronounce the word is Bree-os-ky—ordinary Italian brioschi. A few days of it will suffice to make most anyone a crank on the subject of intestinal bathing.

Colds — At first sign of a cold, take NR—NATURE'S REMEDY—the laxative that thoroughly cleans your intestines. It is the one quick way to get relief and guard your health. Mild, safe, purely vegetable, pleasant—25c. NR TO-NIGHT TO-MORROW ALRIGHT. The All-Vegetable Laxative

Manager Felled By Gun's Blow; Radio Announcer Held Up in Schenley Park

After one of their number clubbed Christ Frisch, 49, of 1212 Sunday street, manager of the East End Parking Garage at 207 Carron street, over the head with a revolver, three armed bandits early today escaped with an automobile.

Frisch told police he opened the door to admit the men in response to their summons. As the bandits entered one of them felled Frisch.

Walter G. Meyers, radio announcer, of 526 East End avenue, was robbed of $8 in Schenley Park, near Park Mansions, last night, acocrding to a police report.

Meyers told police the highwaymen blocked his car, and robbed him after threatening him with revolvers. They returned his wallet after removing its contents, Meyers told police.

Thieves who broke into the Cookware Company of America, 8493 Penn avenue, early today, ransacked the place, C. F. Roxrode, district manager, reported to police.

1932 ESTIMATE INCREASED BY SALARIES

Board to Meet Next Week In Effort to Pare Total; Cost Economy Stressed

With the 1932 budget requirements for Pittsburgh public schools in the hands of Board of Education members today, it was indicated that there will be little or no change in this year's school tax millage of 11¾ mills.

The budget for 1932 totals $15,649,153.17 as against the 1931 total of $15,595,623.83, an increase of $52,529.34. Beginning next week, meetings will be held in an effort to pare the budget.

The budget shows that of the increase, $33,263.47 occurs in the salary item, representing part of the cost of additional employes required in 1932 due to the opening of Prospect Junior High, the H. B. Davis Elementary, the Knoxville High addition and the Arsenal Junior High, all new schools.

NEW TEACHERS NEEDED

Prospect will require 12 new teachers and Arsenal 23. Five will be needed in Allderdice High School and eight in Clifford B. Connelley Trade School.

The new employes, principals, clerks, teachers and custodians, call for $77,225.33 additional in next year's budget. The automatic salary increases that teachers receive under state law, call for $90,142.50.

It was pointed out that notwithstanding these increase factors, which would call for an increase of $276,190.33, the actual increase in salary items is only $33,263.47, because of a rigid program of economy carried out during the past year.

PAYROLL ECONOMIES

The reports of the school superintendent, it was said, up to and including September, 1931, reflect a decrease in the instruction payroll of $106,110.00. The number of persons employed by the education board in October of this year is 4,654 as compared to 4,682 employed in October, 1930.

These economies, it was declared, have been brought about while the full time enrollment in schools increased from 104,069 in September, 1930, to 105,819 in September, 1931. This increase represents $410,410.67, based upon the 1930 costs for each child. In addition, there was an increase of 270 part time students.

CANNING DRIVE NEEDS CABBAGE

Further strides in the canning of sauerkraut were being made today by the Surplus for the Needy Committee, in its project of supplying fruit and vegetables to the destitute this winter. An appeal for cabbage has been voiced by heads of the organization, with headquarters in the Berger Building.

Sauerkraut, which can be packed with little expense and which will provide nourishment for hundreds this winter, is being prepared by expert canners at the Surplus for the Needy's canning factory on Spring Garden avenue, North Side.

A further appeal for sugar and cash contributions to buy it was broadcast today. Production at the plant, which has been going ahead on a 24-hour basis, is reaching a high point, officials said.

While the goal of a million cans set by the committee has not yet been reached, there are indications that it will be before the close of the canning season, according to J. F. Quick, director.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Been having a big celebration down at Yorktown. The state of Virginia celebrating their taking over the 13 colonies from England and eventually losing the management of them to Pennsylvania and Mellon. I bet if Cornwallis was alive today he would have entered into the spirit of that celebration for he just looked ahead 150 years and lost that war on purpose. Look at the Philippines: If one of our generals would lose them for us he would be our great national hero.

Yours, WILL.

SYMPHONY AID PLANS READY

A general invitation to the public to help celebrate Symphony Week has been extended by the Pittsburgh Symphony Society which has arrangements well under way for the observance which begins Monday. The importance of having a symphony orchestra will be stressed and efforts will be made to enroll music lovers in the Pittsburgh Symphony Society. Five Sunday night concerts are to be given this season, the first November 8, with Antonio Modarelli conducting and Elsa Alsen as guest artist. No tickets are sold for the concerts, and it is necessary to become a member of the society at the beginning of the season to obtain seats.

The city Department of Health today reports these new cases in quarantine: Scarlet fever, 3; diphtheria, 1; measles, 3; whooping cough, 6; mumps, 3; pneumonia, 4, and erysipelas, 1.

Ads Should Equal News In Interest, Store Heads Told in Pitt Conference

Newspaper advertisements of department stores should rank in interest with the news and editorial columns, was the advice today advanced to local and out-of-town store executives attending the annual conference of the Research Bureau for Retail Training, University of Pittsburgh, by Louis Fairchild, news editor, Fairchild Publications.

The advertisements must lead and direct public opinion on style and price, Mr. Fairchild held in speaking at the afternoon session devoted to the function of publicity. The meetings are being held in the William Penn Hotel. Other speakers included Paul Hollister, of New York, and Arthur C. Kaufmann, president, McCreery & Co.

Stressing the influence of newspaper advertising, Mr. Fairchild asserted:

"Resultant advertising must today say something that arrests attention of the people it is intended to interest—that helps the public to buy. Even with business so hard to get, newspaper advertising has registered in higher priced lines, and that advertising response does seem to indicate the possibility of featuring the slightly higher priced lines.

"While advertising's job is to sell goods, it must lead and direct public opinion on style and price. Retail advertising of 1932 should be surpassed only by the editorial and news columns of the newspapers themselves. And a little occasional note of competitive courtesy and consideration of pride in the business as a whole would be a cardinal quality."

A practical interview between a prospective department manager and the management, with four local department store executives participating, was a feature during the morning.

Interview were I. D. Wolf, secretary, Kaufmann's; George Fitzpatrick, controller, Frank & Seder, and A. H. Burchfield, Jr., publicity director, Joseph Horne Company. The discussion leader was Clay Myers, merchandise manager, Joseph Horne Company.

The sessions, which close tomorrow night with a banquet at which Dr. Paul N. Nystrom, professor in the School of Business, Columbia University, will be the principal speaker, are being devoted to the analysis of department store management, control and training.

Eaton, librarian of Harrisburg Public Library, will be chairman of discussions of large public libraries.

Tomorrow night John Macy, critic and historian, will address the delegates at a banquet in the Hotel Schenley.

N. Y. 'HOLMES' SPEAKS HERE

Capt. Michael Fiaschetti, whose record as a detective on the New York Police Department rivals that of the mythical Sherlock Holmes, visited Pittsburgh to address the American Society of Municipal Engineers in Hotel William Penn yesterday.

Capt. Fiaschetti has written many magazine articles and books. His latest book, "You Gotta Be Rough," tells of the star sleuth's adventures.

Commenting on the gangsters of today, Capt. Fiaschetti said:

"Al Capone? Why he's just a clown that made good. He has brains, but 'Legs' Diamond is nothing more than a drug addict and a bum."

The large number of racket murders in the Pittsburgh district and the bombing of the Italian consul will not be solved unless a clue to the identity to the perpetrators is obtained, he said. Capt. Fiaschetti agrees the police "third degree" is brutal, but is applicable in cases of hardened criminals.

Fiaschetti, retired in 1924 as head of the Italian squad, after 16 years of service which gained him the reputation of being one of the greatest murder detectives in the country.

Ninety-five per cent of his 500 homicide arrests resulted in convictions, 52 receiving the death penalty, he said.

Theme Songs Of Old Times And New Times

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The Revolutionary celebration at Yorktown is okay. That's the only war we are sure we won.

Lord Cornwallis marched out to the tune of, "The World Is Upside Down." That air is topical again.

Franklin Roosevelt's campaign ballad is, "Everything Is Peaches Down in Georgia." Only 35 more states required for ratification.

Congress is getting ready to warble, "Will We Bluff You in December as We Did in May?"

England is reviving that old tear-jerker, "Take Back Your Gold, Your Standard Cannot Buy Me."

The old guard and the western Republicans are featuring their solo, "If We Can't Be the Same Old Sweethearts, Let's Be the Same Old Fiends."

Bridge Sculpture Must Be Art; Bids Rejected

Bids of four concerns which submitted prices for a sculptural figure to be placed at one end of the new West End-North Side bridge were thrown out by the Commissioners and the work will be awarded after sculptors submit sketches of the work they propose to do.

The action came after a long discussion at the Commissioners' meeting yesterday on just how the County should go about buying a piece of art. Frank Vittor, nationally known sculptor, and a representative of the Donatelli Granite Company expressed views concerning the work and how it should be done.

Said Vittor:

"If the County wants real art work and a monument to be proud of, that is what I can give it."

Said the Donatelli Company representative:

"We can do just as good a job as anybody at the price. It's not fair to throw out the bids."

But the Commissioners did. Said Commissioner McGovern:

WELFARE FUND LEADER LOOKS TO INDUSTRY

Employed Men and Women, Realizing Need, Will Give Liberally, Quinby Says

Confidence was expressed today by William E. Quinby, plant solicitation chairman of the Welfare and Emergency Fund's joint campaign, that the drive's mainstay will be the individual worker who still has his job with no material cuts in pay. He said:

"There are thousands of employed men and women whose earnings are what they were before the depression began, and there are many who have not lost more than possibly 10 per cent.

"I look for the most sweeping campaign result in Allegheny County's industries and business establishments that has been achieved since the war, because everyone realizes that present conditions must be faced and overcome."

Two thousand men and women will comprise the organization under Quinby, with solicitations extending from November 9 to 23.

SCHOOL BUDGET ESTIMATE UP

are $27,500 less than the appropriations for 1931. Included in this is a decrease of $11,900 for textbooks, $31,725 for fuel and $10,925 for instruction and physical training supplies.

OPERATING COSTS CUT

Electric power and operating expenses show a decrease of $12,530, while the item for milk for undernourished children is increased $17,000. The transportation of pupils, having to pay more than one car fare, is estimated to add $9,490 to the budget. The board's boiler insurance, it was said, will have to be renewed in 1932, increasing the insurance item by $9,000.

Capital outlay requirements for 1932, to be paid from current tax money, are estimated at $73,864.20 less than for 1931, and an item of $10,000 in the 1931 budget for acoustic improvements to auditoriums is eliminated. All other capital outlay items show decreases for 1932.

The board will have available for new school buildings and repairs to old properties $4,872,087.17. Of this amount, $2,715,097.17 is available from previous bond issues not yet expended.

CONSTRUCTION FUND

This, together with a proposed bond issue of $1,500,000, will make $4,215,097.17 of bond money available for new school properties and construction work. In addition, there is the repairs and building improvement program provided for in the budget, requiring $656,990.

Provision is made for a bond issue in 1932 of $1,500,000 for new properties and additions to old buildings. Taking this into consideration and also the fact that two interest payments of $63,750 and $61,615 on the 1931 bond issue will be due in 1931 instead of one interest payment as in 1931, there is an increase in the debt service item of $141,625. The decreases in the cost of former bond issues that are being repaid bring the net increases down to $120,630, it was declared.

Tone of U. S. Films Highest, Asserts Mrs. Diehl

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—American motion pictures, Mrs. Ambrose N. Diehl, of Pittsburgh, said on her return from an International Council of Women's meeting in Rome, are the most wholesome of any nation's productions. She declared:

"While national censorship seems to have a certain political place in some European countries, I found no woman among all that world group who believed that censorship had any virtue as an implement of better pictures."

Mrs. Diehl, motion picture chairman of the National Council of Women and of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, adressed the Rome convention.

FOOD SALE PLAN PROMISED AID

Retail merchants, at a meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel yesterday, pledged co-operation with the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the bureau's effort to improve methods of merchandising food and allied products in the Pittsburgh district. J. V. Loughran, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association of Allegheny County, presided.

G. E. Bittner, assigned by the government to direct Pittsburgh's better merchandising plan for six months, was the principal speaker. Other speakers were C. A. Kolb, president, and Donald Brigham, vice president of the Pittsburgh Food Council. Bittner said in part:

"In carrying out our program we shall select about 25 stores faced with problems that are typical to almost all stores. We shall analyze these stores to discover any weak spots that may exist and, if such are found, give definite suggestions based on previous surveys as to how improvements could be made.

"The advice and counsel that are given will benefit not only the merchant whose store is studied, but will be available to any grocer who cares to have this information."

let's all go to Turkey

Where Turkish tobacco comes from

Eastward ho! Four thousand miles nearer the rising sun—let's go! To the land of mosques and minarets—so different from our skyscrapers, stacks and steeples.

Let's see this strange, strange country. Let's see the land where the tobacco* grows in small leaves on slender stalks—to be tenderly picked, leaf by leaf, hung in long fragrant strings, shelter-dried and blanket-cured. Precious stuff!

Let's taste that delicate aromatic flavor—that subtle difference that makes a cigarette!

In every important tobacco-growing center of Turkey, Chesterfield has its own tobacco buyers on the spot

XANTHI . . CAVALLA . . SMYRNA . . SAMSOUN . . famous tobaccos!

*Turkish tobacco is to cigarettes what seasoning is to food—the "spice," the "sauce"—or what rich, sweet cream is to coffee!

You can taste the Turkish in Chesterfield—there's enough of it, that's why. Chesterfield has not been stingy with this important addition to good taste and aroma; four famous kinds of Turkish leaf — Xanthi, Cavalla, Samsoun and Smyrna — go into the smooth, "spicy" Chesterfield blend.

This is just one more reason for Chesterfield's better taste. Tobaccos from far and near, the best of their several kinds—and the right kinds. And pure, tasteless cigarette paper, the purest made. The many requisites of a milder, better smoke, complete!

That's why they're GOOD—they've got to be and they are.

Love Story Shows Wife's Aid to Edison

This is the first chapter of the love story of Thomas Edison and Mina Miller. It is here told for the first time in entrancing detail. It is herewith presented as read and revised by the heroine — today the widow of one of the world's greatest shining lights.

The whole world—so they say—loves a love story.

It is strange, then, that the greatest love story of all has been passed by until now.

It is strange that no one dwelt upon the love story of the man who invented the movies, and the girl for whom, it might be said, the movies were invented.

The romantic story of a man, who, after 45 years of married life still would not permit anyone else to hold his coat for him when he went out, than the gracious woman who did it for almost half a century. The man who would not leave home on any mission, without her good-bye kiss at the door.

MARRIED 45 YEARS AGO

For Thomas A. Edison, in his modest, tender fashion, placed his heart and soul and talents in the hands of a brown-eyed girl named Mina Miller, of Akron, O., when he married her 45 years ago. That was the year the inventor started to develop a funny little box peep-show called the kinetoscope, which was later to initiate the new art of the motion picture.

Mina Miller was only 21 when she went as the bride of Thomas Edison to live in the gabled house among the trees of Llewellyn Park, in New Jersey. They had been married several months before, on February 24, 1886, and had gone directly to Fort Myers in Florida, where the inventor, even then quite well established for his invention of the electric light, was building a winter home, which together they have seen grow from sand and palmettos to one of the beauty spots of Florida.

She was a charming girl, vivacious and gracious, with the brownest eyes, and a depth of understanding and sympathy for humanity which seemed beyond her years.

DAUGHTER OF INVENTOR

The daughter of Lewis Miller, who was one of the two founders of Chautauqua, she had been brought up in a cultured and hospitable household, abounding in beautiful daughters, and built on the highest ideals of family life. Her father was an educator, inventor and manufacturer of farm machinery.

Thomas Edison was already the inventor of the electric light and the phonograph and of other important factors which greatly have influenced modern life.

Their first meeting had taken place at the home of mutual friends in Boston, where Mina Miller was a pupil at a boarding school. She and the inventor were invited to be the guests at the same week-end house party. It was love at first sight! Her poise and ready understanding won his heart completely. And she was quite as enchanted by the simple directness of his character.

This meeting was followed by others sponsored by the friends under whose hospitable roof they had been brought together. These occasions included a gay six weeks' excursion with these friends into New Hampshire.

EDISON A WIDOWER

Mr. Edison was a widower with three young children, Marian, Thomas Alva, Jr., and William Leslie. His first wife, who had been an associate in earlier laboratory experiments, had passed on three years before. It was inevitable that he should wish to make this most estimable young woman his wife.

When Mina Miller went back home to Akron, at the close of the school term, Thomas Edison went to visit her, and became acquainted with her family. Within a few months they were married, and on their way to Mr. Edison's home in Florida.

Six weeks before their marriage there was a very important question to be decided. Should they settle in a house on Riverside drive or in a large rambling dwelling called Glenmont, at Llewellyn Park, the place near where Mr. Edison had visions of establishing a great laboratory in West Orange, N. J. Edison wanted, more than he could tell, for this lovely girl to live where she would be happiest.

It was only a few years before the "gay nineties." Riverside Drive glittered with a constant parade of fashionable equipages. Drawn by proud horses, elegant ladies in pompadours and drooping hats, and gentlemen with waxed mustaches, went out every afternoon for a ride to the Claremont Inn for tea, or for a drive around Grant's tomb. The house in New York which Mr. Edison was considering for his bride commanded this fascinating scene, as well as a sweeping view of the Hudson River.

GAVE UP GAY CITY

Llewellyn Park was two hours of smoky and grimy travel out of New York in an age before the motor car, electric railways or subways. The charm and gaiety of life in New York appealed to Mina, but she knew that it would prove distracting to the promising young inventor, whose bride she was to be. So she chose what was then the "wilds of New Jersey," so he might be near his laboratory.

It was no child's play, this marrying of a man whose life was at the beck and call of genius—of genius so great that he would forget for days and nights at a stretch everything but the new ideas which were crowding into his mind to find expression in his inventions.

SPURNED SOCIETY

The usual round of social life made up of parties, receptions, cards, idle chatter, and other forms of so-called recreation had no interest for him. Eating was something that must be indulged in merely as an obligation to nature, never as a pastime or an art.

Evening clothes were an abomination and a scourge and something to be avoided except in the direst extremity. The great inventor never could remember such trivial things as weddings and birthday anniversaries.

Most girls pine and sigh to step out of what they consider their own drab lives into the heart and home of some wealthy and famous man. They long for love and luxuries and an elaborate establishment with many servants.

How many beautiful and well educated and well poised girls of 20 would be ready to take hold of the home and life of a great and wealthy and famous man like Thomas Edison—as Mina Miller did?

She immediately set out to plumb the depths of her husband's tastes and interests, to find ways and means in which Mr. Edison's home might be made to contribute to the great life work which she knew would go on demanding more and more of him.

SIMPLE HOME LIFE

She found that he loved music. The children were taught to make up an orchestra, and the evenings were devoted to the old-fashioned music the head of the family loved, but with enough of the new popular music to satisfy the youngsters. "To An Evening Star" from Tannhauser and "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" were among his favorite numbers.

Mr. Edison was fond of flowers. The conservatory and lawns were laid out with an infinite variety of flowering plants and shrubs.

But quietness, and retreat in his own study were from the first permitted to the head of the house. He came and went, worked and stayed awake, read his beloved magazines, and had his snatches of sleep as he could take them.

Mrs. Edison grew accustomed to sitting up night after night, waiting as eagerly as her husband to learn the results of the experiments that were being carried on in the laboratory.

Sometimes she would run over with sandwiches to refresh the busy man who in the ecstacy of his creative work had entirely forgotten that there was such a thing as food.

LISZT BIRTHDAY PROGRAM :-: Shilkret to Play Famed Composition :-: STORY OF RHAPSODY

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

SECOND HUNGARIAN Rhapsody, famed the world over for the manner in which it portrays the sadness and gaiety of a race of people has yet a more lovely interpretation in the way Franz Liszt happened to compose it. Playing of the number by Nathaniel Shilkret's Orchestra over WCAE at 8:30 tonight in commemoration of the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of Liszt's birth calls to mind the interesting part that romance played in the great composer's life. . . The story goes that Liszt loved a gypsy girl whose camp was not far from his home . . . her father was unfriendly with the musical genius and, in fact, ordered Liszt away . . . But Liszt was not so easily discouraged . . . his admiration for the girl was as potent as his music and he stole into the camp at night to play for her the vibrant, pulsating bars of "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" with violin and bow he serenaded her. One night the girl's father caught Liszt at the enchanting hour, escorted him to the outskirts of the camp, left him there with a warning never to return. . . It was the end of his rendezvous with love . . . he entered a monastery . . . Many years later it was here that he received one day an envelope containing nothing but a faded white rose, a flower of memory—of gypsy love days—and thus inspired, composed on an old reed organ in the chapel, the next famous of his many talented works "Liebestraum" or "Dream of Love."

RESTFUL SLEEP
for
FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

. . . with Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. It may be an overloaded stomach, a starting cold, a little fever.

More often than not the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives.

Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. And children take it without coaxing. They like its taste.

Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then come relaxed comfort and restful sleep! You'll know genuine Castoria—by the name Chas. H. Fletcher on the package.

Chas. H. Fletcher.

A message to thousands of women who have said,

"I've always longed to drive a Roadster"

DEEP in the heart of almost every woman who drives a car is a longing for a roadster . . . a trim and stylish car that she may call her very own.

That dream, long cherished, can now come true. For here, at an unusually low price, is a roadster that is the very answer to your hopes. So alert and reliable that it puts a new joy in motoring. So altogether smart and stylish that it merits an admiring turn of the head on every highway.

The Ford De Luxe Roadster is beautifully finished in a variety of colors. Blonde or brunette, there is a color to suit your particular taste and type—perhaps even to match your Fall ensemble.

The wide seat is done in genuine leather with deep comfortable cushion and back. Head lamps, radiator shell, cowl lights, cowl finish strip, hub caps, tail light and door handles are made of Rustless Steel. There's a roomy rumble seat for those many occasions when you've three or four in the party.

The windshield folds flat and is made of Triplex polished plate safety glass—for your added protection in driving. Natural wood bows give added charm to the distinctive tan top.

See this beautiful De Luxe Roadster at the nearest Ford dealer's and arrange for a demonstration. In beauty, comfort, safety and performance, you will know it is a real bargain at $475.

(F. O. B. Detroit, plus freight and delivery. Bumpers, spare tire, side fender-well, and trunk rack extra at low cost. Small down payment and easy terms through the economical Authorized Ford Finance Plans of the Universal Credit Company.)

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Can a Girl Chew Gum and Keep Fascinating?

Harry's starting it . . . and he's plenty peeved . . . which you'll likely be, too, when you've read his letter. Or do you agree with him?

What's it about? Smoking femmes? Bobbed hair? Empress Eugenie hats? Nope! You guessed wrong! It's about chewing gum!

"I'm sick and tired," says he, "of seeing women on every street car chewing their cuds like cows! It's an outrage!"

"Dear Madam:

"Will you allow me to speak my mind about a disgraceful thing that we see on every side these days . . . a thing that just simply gets anyone who has a spark of delicacy?

"I am referring to the awful habit that is getting so common of chewing gum in public. It is getting so you can't get on a bus or a street car without seeing half a dozen sets of busy jaws going. It is disgusting, and I think something ought to be done about it. Haven't the American people any manners?

"We don't eat sandwiches or drink coffee as we walk along the street or travel in a public conveyance. Then why should we exercise our facial muscles on gum in plain sight of everyone?

"Of course it is necessary for a cow to chew her cud, but a cow is one of the lower animals. Man is supposed to be the highest type of animal. I'm beginning to doubt it."

FACES DISTORTED

"I wonder if women would keep on sitting chewing in public places the way they do if they could just once get a good look at themselves. I have never been able to understand a woman—or anyone—chewing gum, anyway. The only possible benefit from it is exercise for the muscles of a person's mouth . . . and in the case of a woman such exercise is not needed. Nature has provided for it by making them such busy gabbers.

"And it's just as bad to see a big strong He-Man or a little runt either indulging in this silly and unattractive habit.

"Why on earth should people want to distort their faces and make themselves ridiculous that way? No human is handsome when eating. And how do they appear when they're munching gum and looking off somewhere with a vacant, cow-like stare? I wonder if these gum chewers ever think of that. If they don't, they might at least think of the feelings of the folks who have to look at them."

IS EXASPERATED

"And when you go in an office somewhere there is nothing more exasperating than to see a clerk chewing gum while you're trying to impress some vital thought on an apparently vacant mind. I'm sure that business men everywhere will agree with me.

"What do you think about it?

"HARRY."

What do I think?

Well, personally, I don't carry a cud. But I'm a careful gal, brother, so I'm gonna stay neutral. We'll let the gang conduct the riot. And I warn you! You'd better hunt cover before they get going!

How about it, Maime, Alice, Floss?

Are you for Harry and quiet jaws? And do you agree that gum chewing is disgraceful?

Or do you think he's a wet smack, and ladies can chaw and still keep their fascinations?

Women Who Make Happiness and Contentment Count Most, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

What a good thing it is that most of the little Mariettas who dream of growing up to be glamorous Maries develop into the home-loving Marys the world has so much more need of.

Just a few glorious Maries are enough for the dazzling careers of public applause.

It is the Marys who are satisfied to make of the humblest home a harbor, a happiness and contentment, who count the most.

When one travels by train across the great breadth of this country from one coast to the other it is the homes one sees that impress one most. Crowded in cities, or dotting the isolated plains and mountainsides.

In each of which is a Mary—a worthy wife, mother and neighbor.

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Gentleman Removes His Hat

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

After removing the hat, does a gentleman stand bareheaded until leaving a lady he has met on the street? READER.

Yes. A gentleman does not replace his hat when talking to a lady in the street until she gives him permission to do so. If she is thoughtless in giving him this permission, he may and should ask for this permission: "Will you pardon me if I put on my hat?" In cold or windy or in any other kinds of inclement weather a lady suggests at once that a gentleman put on his hat.

Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

"Mrs. Allen, may I present Dr. Bryan?" or "Mrs. Wells, this is Dr. Bryan." To gentleman, "Mr. Allen, Dr. Bryan," or Dr. Bryan, Mr. Allen."

The coronet braid is making an effort to stage a come-back. Grandma will tell you about the coronet, how she wore it atop the inside pompadour, and then put a bunch of puffs atop the braid. This new comer is a skinny little descendent of the old-time braid that was thick and fat and weighed all of four ounces. New one is worn far back, not close to the hair line. Some of the movie dollies are sporting it.

After a motor trip a woman feels better but looks worse. Dust of the road kicks up a fuss with cuticle cells, wind adds to the havoc, change of food and water are often no help toward keeping the complexion normal and in order. So ply the cold cream, put it on generously and thoroughly, and don't forget that cream performs its rejuvenating work best when applied to a skin surface that is warm and glowing, but not moist. Dry skins feast on cream, especially those heavier emollients that don't disappear right away.

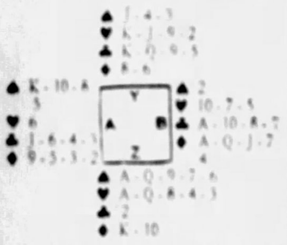
OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

A Semi-Demand Illustrated

Arranging your cards with the black and red suits alternating, as shown below, is one of the best preventives against revoking. The values assigned suits are wholly arbitrary, affording no reason for sorting your cards according to suit values. If hearts and diamonds are in juxtaposition it is very easy to play one red suit for the other, especially in a poor light.



In lettered diagrams like that above, Z always is the dealer and Y is his partner. A always sits at the left of the declarer. B is A's partner and is the last to bid.

The dealer 'Z' made a semi-demand bid of 2-spades which A passed. Disregarding the fact that he should not jump his partner's bid, Y foolishly ended contracting with 4-spades, because he held somewhat better than minimum supporting strength. As a result the contract was defeated by one trick upon a loss of two trump tricks and one trick each in clubs and diamonds. Had Y bid only 3-spades Z would have shifted to 4-hearts, thereby saying: "Partner I have a two-suiter, with hearts as good as spades; please choose between them." Holding better support for hearts than for spades, with no slam prospects, Y would have passed, and game could not have been lost.

It does not prove that a bid is good or bad because it turns out a particular way with one of the three other players as a partner. It is excellent practice to in turn give the original holdings of A and B to Z's partner. Had Y held A's cards he would have bid 3-spades. Z should have shifted the make to 4-hearts, which his partner would have overcalled with 4-spades. Weak as are A's holdings, by trumping three hearts Z should go game.

Had the cards of Y and B been dealt in reverse positions bidding would have gone: Z, 2-spades; Y, 3-diamonds; Z, 3-hearts; Y, 3-no trumps; Z, 4-hearts. This bidding would have shown clearly that Z held a two-suiter. It is axiomatic that a two-suiter plays best at one of those suits, rather than at no-trumps, as Y better supported hearts than spades he would allow the former make to stand and Z would go game.

Tests and Anti-Toxins Prevent Scarlet Fever

Much has been accomplished in the prevention and treatment of scarlet fever. Our new knowledge dates back to 1923 and 1924. It was at this time that the "Dick test" was first announced. Its use is believed to have caused a great reduction in the occurrence of scarlet fever.

Dr Copeland

The test is simple. It consists of injecting underneath the skin a certain toxin. If a child is susceptible to scarlet fever, a definite rash is produced.

When the Dick test is positive, it means that the child should receive the injection treatment to guard against scarlet fever. These injections are simple and they contribute to the safety of the child.

Please remember that this treatment is not intended to be a remedy for scarlet fever. It is used as a means of preventing it. For this reason it has a high place in guarding the schools and communities.

The serum is given in five injections at intervals of seven days. This is the same for children and for adults. It is a simple treatment and no ill effects result from it. It is said to give definite protection against scarlet fever for a period of at least five years.

It would mark a great advance in public health if all children were immunized against scarlet fever. The importance of this test cannot be overestimated. We pray it may meet with the same success that has attended the prevention of diphtheria.

Please do not confuse the two procedures. The test for determining the susceptibility to diphtheria is the "Schick test." The test for determining the susceptibility to scarlet fever is the "Dick test."

Three important things can be done by the mother for the protection of her child. They are smallpox vaccination, scarlet fever immunization and diphtheria immunization.

Consult with your physician or the local board of health about these matters. Much unnecessary suffering and worry will be escaped by attention to them.

In addition to the prevention of scarlet fever, tremendous strides have been made in the treatment of this disease. This has been accomplished by the development of a scarlet fever antitoxin. This is believed to have saved the lives of many children.

Household Hints

Organdie collar and cuff sets will be just the right degree of stiffness if dipped into water in which rice has been boiled.

If baby continually pulls the ties out of his bootees, tack them securely to the back of the bootees with strong cotton and the trick cannot be done.

Hold the fish under running water while scaling it. This will prevent the scales from scattering, besides being a less objectionable job. Begin at the tail of the fish and scrape toward the head.

Cooking meat over the camp fire seems to be the special province of men of the family, and how they do dote on getting the wood laid just right. They always like to officiate in the broiling, too, and know to a nicety just the psychological moment to stop.

3 out of 4 gargle uselessly while sore throats get worse and colds hang on

Don't waste dollars on antiseptics that must be used full strength. We've discovered a new antiseptic that, even when diluted with two parts of water, kills germs in 10 seconds.

STOP gargling for a minute. Please answer this question: Do you add water to your mouth wash? 3 out of 4 do. Adding water robs most mouth antiseptics of power to kill germs. That's how millions fool themselves—but not their colds—and not the germs . . . nor bad breath.

If you dilute your antiseptic choose one that kills germs even when diluted. Otherwise you haven't any right even to hope for quick relief.

A radical new antiseptic discovery

Now there's a revolutionary antiseptic on the market—Pepsodent Antiseptic. Its formula is a radical advance. It climaxes the best antiseptic study of 50 years. A germ-killing agent is employed unlike those now in use. It makes Pepsodent Antiseptic from 3 to 11 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics, depending on which one you use.

Kills germs in 10 seconds diluted with 2 parts of water

That is the startling news in this new discovery. Think! You can mix Pepsodent Antiseptic with one or even two parts of water, to suit your taste, and it still kills germs in less than 10 seconds. That's where most other leading mouth antiseptics fail. Yet in spite of all that power, Pepsodent Antiseptic is utterly safe when used full strength. What a weapon this new antiseptic is in your fight against colds!

BAD BREATH (Halitosis*)

Pepsodent Antiseptic does double duty when combating colds and throat irritations. For at the same time it checks bad breath. Remember P.A. is 3 to 11 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics . . . and it kills germs when diluted.

New security against bad breath (Halitosis*)

And please remember when you use Pepsodent Antiseptic for colds you are doing double duty by also fighting bad breath. For Pepsodent Antiseptic checks bad breath 1 to 2 hours longer! That's Pepsodent Antiseptic's record in fighting this widespread social offense due to unhygienic mouth conditions. Immediately after use—95% of germs on mouth surfaces are destroyed. Two hours later the number of germs remains reduced by 75%. That is far longer acting than other leading mouth antiseptics.

$3 Worth for $1—regardless of size

To kill germs—most mouth antiseptics must be used full strength. So to mix such antiseptics with water is a waste of money. Pepsodent Antiseptic, contrariwise, can be mixed with twice its own volume of water. Thus Pepsodent Antiseptic goes 3 times as far—saves you $2 for every $1 you spend. Pepsodent Antiseptic comes in 3 sizes: 3 ounces for 25 cents—7 ounces for 50 cents—16 ounces for $1. The larger the size the cheaper per ounce.

Combating a cold and checking bad breath are only two uses for this remarkable antiseptic. There are scores of other uses. Some are listed on this page. Learn to rely on Pepsodent Antiseptic whenever a safe, effective germ-killing agent is required. Keep it in the home. Take it with you when you travel.

Again we say: Quit being good to germs. They've laughed at you long enough. Play safe. Buy an antiseptic that really kills germs when diluted. Remember: You can fool yourself but you can't fool a cold.

Mother Graham Capitulates Before Madge's Apologies

I almost threw up my hands, literally, at my mother-in-law's offended query. It seemed a hopeless task which I had undertaken—that of getting her in a good humor before my father should talk to her upon the subject of the name he wished to give our new baby girl. But the memory of my father's face, stirred so strongly by memories of his old tragedy, gave me courage for another trial.

"I'm so sorry, Mother," I said. "I didn't mean to offend you. You are always discretion itself. I know that perfectly. Why I asked you I don't know. My anxiety that the boys should not be hurt ran away with me, I fancy."

To my horror I found my voice shaking, and closed my lips tightly to prevent their trembling. But, as it turned out, not even a burst of sobbing would have been as effective a weapon against my mother-in-law's captiousness. Like her son, she is tyrannical in her tempers, royal in her contrition. With a dismayed little sound she came swiftly toward me and put her hand upon my shoulder, a caress which means as much from her as would a fervent embrace from most women.

"Don't mind me, child," she said hurriedly. "I've no business worrying you with my bad temper when you have so much on your mind and are not strong yet. And I do appreciate all you are doing for poor Elizabeth's children, even though I don't go around telling about it all the time. So just put me out of your mind for the rest of the day. And you may be very sure that I shan't say anything about those foolish boys."

"Thank you so much," I murmured. "And now won't you tell me what I can do for you?"

"Do for me?" she echoed, blankly.

"Why, yes. You called me, you remember, and I could not come then."

"Oh!" She hesitated a moment, and I surmised that she had completely forgotten what she wished of me.

"It was something so unimportant that it isn't worth mentioning," she said, a least bit loftily, "and I don't need it now. You're looking rather pale. You would better go and lie down a bit before dinner."

"Perhaps I shall," I said, "but won't you come over to the girls' room. They're unpacking the new things they bought at Southampton."

"Perhaps, after a while," she said, as I expected. I think she is congenitally incapable of accepting an invitation as soon as it is given, although she is mortally offended if through any oversight she is not summoned to share in any unusual happening of the family.

"I'll tell them you're coming over later," I said, as I went out of the door, feeling as might a small boy whose switching had just been canceled. If nothing else happened to upset her she would be in a mellow mood all through the evening, and my father would have a fair chance of impressing her with his story.

I went to the kitchen and asked Katie to keep silent about the burning of the white-flannel trousers. She bent double with laughter and I thought she would never stop giggling.

Dose boys tink dey beeg fellars now, all ready to go courtin'," she said when she could speak. "But I say nodings und I tell dot Jeem to keep hees beeg mout' shut, too."

"Thank you, Katie," I said, refraining heroically from reminding her that stolid—and discreet—Jim would never have to be admonished to keep silent about anything. But Katie hugs to her soul the belief that she rules her quiet husband, when in reality he is her balance wheel.

I was at the kitchen door before I thought of Dicky's promise and turned back.

"Mr. Graham said that he would telephone what time he was coming back, so that you would know when to put dinner on," I said.

"Yah, I hear heem tell dot before," she answered with a good-natured grin that made up for her impudent manner of speaking a truth well known to both of us. "But I tink I not put dot steak in oven till I hear dot car drive in. All oder tings I keep hot ofer hot vater."

"That will be very wise," I told her, and went upstairs again to the room where Mary and Marion were displaying their purchases to Katherine, with Lillian looking on happily. I inspected the sport frocks, sweaters, hats and shoes hurriedly but approvingly, and then managed to slip away with Lillian to my room.

"I hope you don't think we spent too much," she said, worriedly, "but you said you wanted Mary to have everything that Marion did, and Harry was determined to buy out the shops."

I loved the prideful note in her voice as she spoke of her husband's devotion to his winsome stepdaughter, and hastened to reassure her.

"Mary needs everything you purchased," I said warmly, "and the things are lovely. So stop worrying about that and tell me what I am going to do if I can't get that letter back."

PLAN SERVICES FOR HOMELESS

Religious services throughout the winter will be conducted for homeless men at the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, 428 Duquesne way, according to an announcement today.

Tomorrow night a motion picture show will be given, it was said, while a stag party with athletic features has been scheduled Friday night. Sunday night it is planned to have a prominent speaker and special vocal and instrumental music.

Because of the manner in which men at the home received the program tendered Monday night by the McKeesport Christian Endeavor, H. W. Shepard, secretary of the association, said that similar programs will be presented each Monday night throughout the winter.

Green PARMELEE SYSTEM EST. 1953 CAB Yellow

Lower taxicab rates to meet 1931 conditions

15¢ first 1/6 mile

10¢ each 2/3 mile thereafter

10¢ extra for each passenger over one for the entire trip

[No extra charge for children 12 years or under]

This voluntary reduction by a company of organized responsibility, in line with the general trend toward lower prices, brings down the rate to one of the lowest in the United States. It cuts the initial meter charge from twenty-five cents for the first quarter mile, to fifteen cents for the first sixth mile. For each ten cents the meter registers after the initial charge, the passenger will now get two-thirds of a mile instead of a half mile; the public for a lower cost gets more mileage.

We are confident that increased volume of patronage will make the reduction successful. It is a rate so low that only public response with added business will determine whether it can be continued and the economic soundness of the rate assured.

The Green and Yellow Cab Companies can make this new rate worth trying because their equipment of cabs, garages, stands and telephone service is more complete and up-to-date than at any time in the past twenty years.

The high standard of quality of service will be maintained

CORNELL AND IRISH LEAD PITT FOES

AMONG THE MAJOR football teams of the country which have been met by Pitt at least four times, only four have averaged more points per game against the Blue and Gold than the Panthers have scored in the same contests. One of them will be faced in South Bend Saturday, when the Pitt gridders clash with Notre Dame for the fifth time in their history. If Marchy Schwartz and his mates outscore the Sutherlands this week-end the Irish may be credited with the highest average ever made by any of Pitt's opponents.

Marchmont Schwartz

In four meetings with the Panthers the South Benders have averaged 11 points per game against an average of 4.7 points for Pitt, a margin of 6.3 points in favor of Notre Dame. The only team to surpass that was Cornell, which has not been met since 1914. In six contests the Ithacans averaged 15 points per game against 6.1 for the locals, an advantage of 8.9 points for Cornell.

THE ONLY OTHER opponents to outscore Pitt were the Carlisle Indians, last faced in 1915 and Lafayette, which has not been encountered since 1924. In eight games Carlisle averaged 10.3 points against 8 for Pitt, an edge of 2.3 points per game for the Indians, and in seven tilts Lafayette averaged 8.5 points against 5.2 for Pitt, a difference of 3.3 points in favor of the Easton gridmen.

Against all other foemen of four or more years, the Panthers have made a better scoring average than the enemy. The team to hold the locals to the narrowest margin was Nebraska, which will be the Thanksgiving Day attraction at the Stadium this year. In five games the Cornhuskers averaged 6 points per contest while Pitt averaged 6.6, a shade of only six-tenths of a point per game for the Panthers. Two of the battles in this series ended in scoreless ties.

PITT'S MARGIN OF superiority has been greatest against West Virginia. In 23 games the home players have averaged 17.6 points against 3.9 for the Mountaineers, a difference of 13.7. Against Carnegie Tech the Panthers have averaged 16 points in 17 games to 3.6 for the Skibos, a margin of 12.4, and against Pennsylvania they have averaged 16.4 points in 10 games to the Quakers' 4.6, an advantage of 11.8 points per game.

Pitt has outscored other opponents per game by the following averages: Syracuse, 10 games, 16.3 points to 5.5; Bucknell, seven games, 11.4 points to 2.1; Navy, five games, 16.8 points to 10, and Penn State, 33 games, 12.6 points to 9.6.

THOUGH THE PITTSBURGH baseball club has not yet made any definite announcement of training plans for next spring, coast reports of exhibition games booked make it certain that the Pirates will again go to Paso Robles for their conditioning work. It is announced that not only will the Buccaneers and Chicago Cubs play a spring series in Los Angeles, but that they will be together during part of the trip back East and probably will play two additional games on Saturday and Sunday dates in Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex. The Giants are also to train in California next spring and will use Wrigley Field in Los Angeles for three weeks while the Cubs are on Catalina Island and in San Francisco, but whether there are to be any practice jousts between the Pirates and Giants has not been made known.

William Harridge

IN ALL PROBABILITY the same type of baseball will be used in the two major leagues next year. It is said the American League is just about convinced that the National's ball is the superior sphere and will adopt it for the 1932 season.

According to Irving Vaughan, Chicago critic, President William Harridge, of the American League, was practically won over to the less lively ball at the end of the world series. Harridge has invited comments and opinions by players, writers and others on the relative merits of the two baseballs preparatory to suggesting to the American League club owners at the December meeting the adoption of the type that proved so satisfactory in the senior loop this year.

SEVERAL OF THE American League moguls have expressed themselves as sharing Harridge's views, and there is said to be little doubt that the proposed change will go through.

The difference between the baseballs was that whereas the American League went in only for raised stitches the National adopted a thicker cover in addition, using a five-ply cover while the American adopted a four-ply type.

THE RESULT WAS that with a less lively ball the National League put on a grade of game that was a closer return to the kind played in the old days, bringing back the stolen base, the sacrifice bunt, the squeeze play, the system of playing for one run, and lower and tighter scores. Meanwhile the slugging game, which had been carried to extremes by the lively ball, continued to some extent in the American League, as witness the fact that for the first time in many years home runs were more numerous in that circuit than in the National.

PERSONAL OBSERVATION AND the views expressed by many fans who attended games frequently in both circuits have convinced the American League chiefs that the kind of ball played in the National was the more pleasing to patrons, and they are said to be ready to make a change that will bring a uniform ball next season.

This will be the second time within a year that the American has swung over to National League ideas in order to reduce slugging, as in the middle of the 1931 season it decided to take the resin bag from the umpire and place it on the ground near the pitcher's slab, giving the hurler the privilege of making unlimited use of it.

WHO WAS MICHIGAN'S greatest kicker? Fielding Yost, who developed them all, says it was Johnny Garrels. Garrels himself says it was Harry Kipke. There were other stars, such as Allerdice and Lawton, but Garrels and Kipke lead in the voting.

There's another Garrels coming along, by the way. Johnny, Jr., is now a freshman at Michigan and among his football assets is said to be an ability to punt. Like Stew Wilson, of W. & J., young Garrels kicks with the left foot, and though his form at present, of course, is not even faintly suggestive of that of his famous father he is reported to show a lot of promise.

Harry Kipke

"GARRELS WAS THE greatest kicker Michigan ever had, and one of her greatest athletes," Yost declared. "Johnny had perfect kicking form. He got the full length of an immense stride into his leg action, and his follow-through was so perfect that when his punt was completed his kicking toe and leg were all but horizontally in line with his body. High punts, giving the ends time to get down, and long ones, gaining a lot of ground, were the results of Garrels' kicks." "That's nice of Coach," Garrels said when told of Yost's remark, "but Harry Kipke was Michigan's greatest kicker. He was uncannily accurate at placing his kicks, and in my day, on the contrary, we weren't emphasizing place punting."

FRANK WOULD MAKE IDEAL BUC PILOT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

After sounding out a number of Pirate fans on the important matter this writer has learned that the officials of the Pittsburgh baseball club would make a ten-strike were they to secure Frank Frisch, captain of the World Champion Cardinals, and the National League's most valuable player in 1931, as the new manager of the local team.

Frank Frisch

Frisch's name was brought into the Pittsburgh picture by an ardent fan who also is an admirer of Jewel Ens, and who feels that Ens, given the proper opportunity and support would handle any major league club as good as the other topliners. But in this fellow's viewpoint, Frisch presents an outstanding opportunity for some owner who is trying to bring prestige back to normalcy.

"Do you realize the tremendous appeal and bright glamour that surrounds the Fordham Flash?" exclaimed the Frisch sponsor. "Frank has been a high spot in four flags won by the Giants and three by the Cardinals. His performance in world series play is striking, and he is a smart, reliable fellow throughout the long championship grinds of the National League.

"Frisch is ripe for a managerial job, and somebody is going to offer him one some of these days, so why not get him in Pittsburgh? The Pittsburgh owners probably would have to pay him something like $20,000, as he is well off in a financial way and can afford to be independent in these matters. But he would be worth a princely sum on account of his prominence. Moreover, he would earn most of his salary on the field of play as he surely will be a star for many years to come."

HOW ABOUT A SWAP?

The Frisch argument is most appealing, but it also has two sides. In the first place, the Cardinal management, while it possibly would not stand in Frisch's way of advancement, would demand a heavy return in the matter of playing talent, and the Frisch booster quoted here made no provision for that big consideration.

In other words the St. Louis folks would stand out for a big star in return or a number of better than ordinary performers. But perhaps they would be interested in Adam Comorosky, George Grantham and Steve Swetonic.

BERT FULLBACK IN PURDUE BATTLE

By JESS CARVER

It looks like Bertie Pouncey, of Memphis, Tenn., sah, will start the game against Purdue at fullback for old Carnegie Tech Saturday. That is the big development so far out at Carnegie, where they are very assiduously prepping for the battle with the Boilermakers.

Bertie Pouncey

The reason Pouncey appears to have the inside track for the starting job is that he is very fast, and fits niftily into the forward passing game. He possibly is not as good on the defense as Jerry O'Toole, but that edge in speeds makes him the choice.

Carnegie held another long workout yesterday, with Bob Waddell hammering away at the boys polishing the offense and checking points on the defense. Pouncey was in the first backfield all the time, along with Capt. Armentrout, Kavel and Stu Dueger.

HEINZER A FIXTURE

They havn't been able to kick this fellow Heinzer out of the right guard, either, since he was inserted into the spot for the game with Georgia Tech. They converted him from a fullback in three days, and he's turned out to be a wow. Paired with the veteran Hooks Sample, he makes the center of the Tech's line a very tough spot.

LUCH TO START

Pitt will have its last really strenuous workout today in preparation for the Notre Dame battle. Monday and yesterday, Jock worked the squad long and hard. There will be no changes in the starting lineup from the one that faced West Virginia, even to Luch at fullback. There was some talk of putting Jimmy Clark back in there against the Irish, but Jock wants to keep Jimmy on the bench for a while. He's too valuable a man to have bunged up right at the start, while Luch, big and powerful, the battering-ram type, is just the sort of a guy to use as for first sock. If Pitt receives the kickoff, I'll bet dough they'll send Johnny ramming the center of the Irish line. It may not be the smart thing to do, but—it won't do those Irish guards much good.

Rip Collins, who turned up with a badly swollen ankle for Monday's practice, has improved greatly, or I mean, the ankle has. Rip's booting is better than it was against West Virginia. If he is consistent against Notre Dame he'll be a valuable asset to Pitt, even though the woods are full of football teams that have not kicked Notre Dame to defeat.

The Panthers will pull out tomorrow night, rattling straight to Niles, Mich., the home of Ring Lardner and half the nation's best wise-cracks. Niles is only about 15 miles from South Bend, so the Panthers will take a bus there Friday afternoon and drill in the Notre Dame Stadium. They'll be quartered at the Niles Country Club over night.

TOUGH TO DOPE

Local folks are having a tough time doping this ball game. You hear 'em on one side talking Pitt, on the other yelping about 12 and 15 points on Notre Dame, but so far, there has been little hard money wagered. I've heard of a few even money wagers, but they mostly were among pals . . . and pals will do most anything.

Pitt authorities figure there will be at least 1,000 local folks in attendance. A number of R. O. T. C. students from Pitt are going to make the trip, the R. O. T. C. having had a payday Monday.

WJAS, by the way, will broadcast the ball game, beginning at 2:45, so Press Agent James Fenimore Cooper Murray announces. Pat Flanagan will be at the mike.

FRISCH NAMED MOST VALUABLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Frankie Frisch, captain and second baseman of the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, after rapping at the portals three previous times in vain, has crashed baseball's hall of fame as the National League's "most valuable player" for 1931.

Announcement of Frisch's selection, by vote of a committee of baseball writers, was made by William J. Slocum, of New York, president of the Baseball Writers' Association, of America. The association is perpetuating the "most valuable player" poll, which was officially dropped by the National League in 1929.

Frisch emerged the victor in a three-cornered battle of ballots with Chuck Klein, slugging outfielder of the Phillies, and Bill Terry, first baseman of the New York Giants. Out of a possible maximum of 80 points, Frisch topped the list with 65, Klein received 55 and Terry 53. No one else was a real contender for the honor, Elwood English, of the Cubs, in fourth place, collecting 30 points.

Seven years ago, 1924, when the first official National League award was made, Frisch registered his first bid by finishing third to Vance, who collected the winner's $1,000. The former Fordham flash then was the keystone man of the New York Giants' infield. After being traded to St. Louis, Frisch was runner-up to Paul Waner in 1927. He also placed second in last year's unofficial contest, trailing Hack Wilson.

Frisch and Terry this year were the only players who scored points on all eight of the writers' ballots. Klein placed on seven of the eight lists. Frisch had only one vote for first place, but piled up his winning total by getting five votes for second place, one for fourth and one for eighth. Terry had one first, one second, three fourths,

W. MARYLAND DUE TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon, the Green Terrors of Western Maryland College arrive here for their night tussle with the Dukes at Forbes Field Friday. Coach Dick Harlow who brought his Terrors to national recognition with 27 straight wins, has coached the visitors in a special attack for the forward-passing Dukes. His scouts reported that the locals had a lot of stuff, though hampered by the weather, against Georgetown, and will be tough to crack. If Coach Layden can keep his team at the peak reached last week, they will indeed be difficult for Western Maryland.

Double-time work is continuing for the gridders as they prepare. Both teams are scheduled to hold the regular Thursday pre-game workouts at Forbes Field tomorrow night. The Green Terrors will make the P. A. A. their headquarters.

The fact that the Duquesne game Friday will be concluded by 10:30 at the latest has made it a popular starting point for many who will attend the Pitt-Notre Dame game the next afternoon at South Bend. Ample time is available to catch the special train, and for that reason John D. Holahan, Duke graduate manager, has numerous parties of fans who will later catch the football special.

Local Gridder Gets Call at Waynesburg

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 21.—A Pittsburgh district youth, Jim Conroy, who at one time starred on the gridiron for Braddock High School, will have an opportunity to star for Waynesburg College in its game here Saturday with New River State College, of Montgomery, W. Va.

As a result of a severe attack of influenza suffered last week by Rab Currie, regular fullback, Coach Wolf plans to place the responsibility of the Waynesburg offensive burden on Conroy's shoulders Saturday.

Sutherland yesterday received a telegram from Anderson in which the Notre Dame coach announced the make and model of ball that will be used in Saturday's battle.

Although not generally known, the "feel" of different makes and models of footballs differs to a certain extent, Sutherland said, and the information volunteered by Anderson will prove of no little assistance to the Panthers in their drills in that they will be able to familiarize themselves with the type of ball to be used.

This is the first time that any coach has had the thoughtfulness to show him this courtesy, according to Sutherland.

HESTON QUITS MICHIGAN

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 21—Willie Heston, son of one of Michigan's most famous stars, turned in his uniform yesterday after being shifted to the second squad. He was a letterman last year and also in 1929.

Heston was demoted when Charley DeBaker, a sophomore, scored three touchdowns against the freshmen, in yesterday's scrimmage. His success and that of other ball carriers, largely was due to improved blocking on the part of the entire team.

FORDHAM CARD SET

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Fordham University has announced its football schedule for 1932, as follows:

October 1, Baltimore; 8, Bucknell; 15, Lebanon Valley; 22, Michigan State; 29, Boston College; November 5, St. Mary's; 12, N. Y. U.; 19, Oregon State.

COSTUME GOLF EVENT TODAY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

A lot of fun at the Country Club of Pittsburgh will wind up a busy season for women golfers at the Beechwood boulevard links—a crazy costume tourney is in progress there today. Following breakfast at 9:30 this morning, Louise Vilsack, in charge of the event, sent the players on their way. It will be loads of fun!

Tomorrow, the Pittsburgh Bond Club is to stage a one-day tourney at the Shannopin Country Club.

Again the unusual in golf at South Park—a professional, H. G. Olsen, who copped the first event, and Mrs. Carrie Josephson Schenley player, took the lead in the second helping hand tourney, a mixed foursome, at that links yesterday, with a card of 42-45—87. Play is to continue through to Saturday, but the fact that a professional golfer is leading the play may cause the already small entry list to be depleted. Entries are still being accepted, however, by Professional Al McBride.

District clubs are preparing for winter sports. Virtually all of the clubs go in for tobogganing, particularly the Pittsburgh Field Club, Allegheny, Longue Vue, Pittsburgh Country Club, Chartiers Heights, and the North and South Park county links. Skiing and ice skating get their share at these and other clubs. Pingpong is a favorite at Shannopin. Badminton gets a play at Allegheny. Indoor golf nets are put up at several clubs. Ice skating ponds are everworked at several links. Trapshooting has its share of followers. But Oakmont is the one place reputed for year-round golf, although individuals play at many of the district clubs throughout the icy season.

At this season, those clubs having bridle paths are finding them much used.

DEMPSEY HUNTING

Fullback Falls Off Helmet Cart, Hurt

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Pete Zimmer, fullback, was out of the University of Chicago practice lineup today because of an injured scalp. He was seated on the helmet cart when the support was suddenly removed and he fell.

Capt. Sam Horwitz watched the Maroons work out from the sidelines, still nursing hurts received in last Saturday's game with Yale. Chicago tackles Indiana next Saturday.

ROWE, FAMOUS TRAINER, DIES

BALTIMORE, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—James Rowe, Jr., trainer for Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stables, died here early today after a two-day illness from acute indigestion. He was 42 years old.

The son of the late James Rowe, head trainer at one time for Harry Payne Whitney's stables, Rowe had trained the champion 3-year-old, Twenty Grand, and was preparing St. Brideaux, a Greentree stable horse, for the $15,000 Maryland handicap at Laurel race track Saturday.

At Rowe's bedside when he died in a hotel here was his wife, and Joseph P. Jamin, of this city, a close friend. He had become ill Monday, showed some improvement last night and his physicians believed for a time yesterday that he would be able to return to Laurel Saturday for the races.

The body will be taken tomorrow to Red Bank, N. J., Rowe's late home, for the funeral.

A graduate of Yale, Rowe followed in the footsteps of his father, whose horses won nearly every important stake in this country. He was regarded by turfmen as one of the best horsemen in the United States.

Jess Haines Feared Lost to Baseball

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Gabby Street, manager of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, today expressed fear that Jess Haines, veteran ace of the St. Louis pitching staff, would never be able to play again because of his arm injury he suffered in a game in Pittsburgh near the close of the 1931 National League season.

Comiskey, Chisox Owner, Gravely Ill

EAGLE RIVER, Wis., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, who has been under the care of doctors at his summer home near here for some time, was reported "very low" last night. Comiskey, an outstanding figure in baseball for years, is 73 years old.

TY ARBOUR, HAWKS' VET, MAY PLAY HERE

LOCAL ICE CLUB LIKELY TO GET WINGMAN

By CARL W. SHATTO

Ty Arbour, speedy wingman, who first achieved hockey fame here, and who was traded to Chicago shortly after Pittsburgh was admitted to the National League, is likely to wear Pittsburgh livery again this season, it was learned today.

Ty Arbour

Arbour has been with the Chicago Hawks, now in training at Duquesne Garden, ever since leaving this city. Officials of the Chicago club today said that Arbour still is good for two or three more seasons of top-speed hockey, and his wealth of experience should make him a valuable addition to Roy D. Schooley's comparatively young International League team.

The Yellow Jackets are well fortified with defensemen, but need one or more new goal getters of the Arbour type.

Johnny Gottselig, the Hawks' crack left wing, arrived here yesterday, completing the Chicago squad of 22 men. Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks, and Bill Tobin, manager, last night left for Chicago after spending a few days watching their charges go through their training paces. Coach Godfrey Mathewson is to be in charge during Tobin's absence.

The advance guard of the Yellow Jacket squad is to report to Coach Charley Reid here late this week. They will scrimmage against the Hawks during their drills, and will top off the training grind with two exhibition games with the big leaguers.

Emil Iverson, physical director, who is said to have worked wonders in getting the Hawks into A-1 condition, is likely to be signed to serve the local skaters in a similar capacity. Iverson has served as hockey coach and director of physical education at the University of Minnesota for the last five years.

REID WATCHES HAWKS

To date the Hawks' workouts on the ice have been confined to morning sessions, and among the interested spectators at these drills is Coach Reid, who hopes to obtain a forward in addition to Arbour from the visitors. Newcomers to the ranks of the Chicago forwards are Jerry Lowrey, former Pittsburgh skater; Paul Thompson, obtained from the New York Rangers for Art Somers and Vic Desjardins; Louis Holmes, a sensation in an Alberta (Canada) league last season, and Norman Locking. Holmes has shown so much class that he is likely to stay with the Hawks, and it appears that Locking, and possibly Lowrey are the boys most likely to be measured for Yellow Jacket uniforms before the season's close.

Hawks other than Lowrey and Arbour well known to local fans are Alex Wood, goalie who performed for Cleveland last season, and Doc Romnes, who was loaned to London for a few weeks last spring. The Jackets don't need Wood, but how they could use Romnes!

PLAY FOOTBALL

Goalies—Chuck Gardner and Alex Wood.
Forwards—Johnny Gottselig, Stew Adams, Tommy Cook, Doc Romnes, Earl Miller, Dick Ripley, Mush March, Lola Couture, Frank Ingram, Paul Thompson, Ty Arbour, Jerry Lowrey, Louis Holmes and Norman Locking.

BYRNE TO PLAY

OTTAWA, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Barred by the National Hockey League because he played in an outlaw circuit, Paddy Byrne, shutout king of the American Hockey League, will return to Kansas City this season.

SHAMROCKS SIGN CARROL

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Leo Carrol, defense star with the Minneapolis club last season, today was signed by the Chicago Shamrocks of the American Hockey League.

$50,000 OFFER REFUSED

DETROIT, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Charles A. Hughes, president of the Detroit Hockey Club, today said he had refused a $50,000 cash offer from the Boston Hockey Association for the services of Ebbie Goodfellow, scoring ace of the Detroit Falcons.

Fight Results

At Portland, Me.—Joe Zelinsky knocked out Henry Goldberg, 10 rounds.
At New York—Jerry Granton defeated Joe Morrow, 8 rounds.

D. & E. PLAYS ST. FRANCIS

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Davis & Elkins College, of West Virginia, meets St. Francis College under the Brookshire here Friday night. St. Francis prides itself on its defensive ability, and has high hopes of making it tough for the Bearlet Hurricane.

INGRAM HONORED

The Crafton-Ingram Church League baseball trophy was presented the Ingram Presbyterians last night at a banquet held in the Chartiers Heights Country Club. Among the speakers were J. Herbert Hersberger, Ronnie Wagner, Al Jessup, William McCoy, Senator James J. Davis, W. S. Guy, the Rev. C. C. Cribbs and Paul Rorty.

Y. M. H. A. IN LOOP

The Y. M. H. A. has joined the National Industrial League for the coming basketball season. Included in the loop are Goodyear and Firestones, of Akron; Pennsylvania, of Cleveland; Glendora, of Oil City; Michigan Central, of Detroit; Canton Industrials and General Electrics, of Fort Wayne.

Dr. McClelland Dropped As Boxing Commissioner

ernor in his letters stressed the point that he had no criticism of his conduct of the office, but wished to appoint another man in his place. In the second letter, the Governor said that "the essential reason (for making the change) is that an error was made in your appointment in the first place."

This latter statement would appear to bear out reports that McGovern had not been consulted, or was "crossed," in the naming of Dr. McClelland, and that the latter was being removed on this account. Dr. McClelland, on the other hand, was quoted as saying that his name was agreed upon at a conference held in Atlantic City last summer, with the understanding that his appointment was not to be made until after October 1, or until the primaries were out of the way.

An emergency situation was created when, on July 2, the adjutant general's office in Harrisburg revealed the fact that, with the removal of Commissioner Boyle and chairman Frank Wiener, of Philadelphia, the commission had ceased to function, lacking a quorum, and a move was made to name an incumbent for one of the posts immediately. A conference was called for the following day, after which McClelland's appointment was announced by the Governor. The Philadelphia berth has not yet been filled.

BOYLE FAVORED

It is understood Boyle is to be reappointed to his old position by Gov. Pinchot.

Dr. McClelland has proved an able and popular boxing commissioner during his brief term of office. He has worked enthusiastically to have the commission function smoothly and has succeeded, despite the fact that he was handicapped and embarrassed no little by constant reports that he might be removed at any time because of the political situation revolving about his appointment.

On October 2 the Governor wrote:

"It is my desire to appoint another man to the position you now now hold as a member of the State Athletic Commission. This is without criticism of yourself, and is based not on anything I have against you, but entirely on my attitude toward the other man.

"I believe, therefore, if you would let me have your resignation it would be the easiest way out of the situation. If you will do so, I will appreciate it."

LETTER SURPRISE

On October 8 Dr. McClelland replied:

"I received your letter of October 2 in which you tell me you desire to appoint another man to the position I now hold, and suggest that I let you have my resignation.

"I am greatly surprised at the suggestion as the administration of my office has been absolutely for the best interest of the state and clean sport. This you agree to in your letter, as you say you have no criticism of me and have nothing against me.

"Several particularly bad messes were inherited by me when I assumed charge here and I have worked hard to rectify or eliminate them. That I have been successful can be verified by the press and a fair-minded public. I am sincere and not vain in believing that conditions relative to boxing and wrestling are better in my district than any time in the past few years. I entered wholeheartedly into this work on July 3 of this year, determined to give a clean, efficient and fair administration and have at all times been guided in my decisions by the principles for which you stand.

"I would appreciate an opportunity to talk this matter over with you before any further action is taken."

APPOINTMENT ERROR

Gov. Pinchot, on October 12, wrote from his home in Milford:

"Your letter of October 8 has just reached me. As I wrote you before, I am not asking for your resignation because of any dissatisfaction with your work. The essential reason is that an error was made in your appointment in the first place.

"I must insist upon your resignation, and if it is not received by Monday, October 19, I shall be obliged to remove you from office."

Dr. McClelland, on October 17, replied:

"I am in receipt of your second letter of October 12 asking that I resign from the State Athletic Commission, and in which you again say that my work has been entirely satisfactory.

"In view of the fact that my administration of the duties of this office has met with your approval and all who came in contact with me, I cannot bring myself to the point of resigning.

"In my letter of October 8 I asked a conference with you concerning your request, and I believe I should be extended this courtesy."

Ending the correspondence, Gov. Pinchot wrote on October 19:

"In accordance with our authority vested in me by Act VI, Section O, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, I hereby remove you as a member of the State Athletic Commission."

COMISH AGAIN LACKS QUORUM

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 21.—The State Athletic Commission was left without a working quorum again today through the removal of Dr. William D. McClelland, Pittsburgh, as member of the commission, by Gov. Pinchot.

Harry T. Farrell, Nanticoke, chairman of the commission, is the only member left in active service. Dr. McClelland was named last July to succeed Havey J. Boyle, Pittsburgh. Frank Wiener, Philadelphia, who had been chairman of the board, was dropped at the same time as Boyle without a successor being named.

The Governor's office today confirmed reports that the Pittsburgh member had been removed, but declined to give detailed explanations of the reason.

"Misrepresentations were made to me about Dr. McClelland in the first place," was the only statement Gov. Pinchot would make.

Dr. McClelland's appointment to the Boxing Commission had been made on recommendation of James F. Malone, Pittsburgh, and removal of the commissioner had been rumored ever since Malone late in August resigned as Secretary of Property and Supplies in the Pinchot cabinet rather than support Charles C. McGovern, then the Governor's choice for Commissioner of Allegheny County in the Republican primaries.

YAROSZ SOUGHT FOR BOUT ON TITLE CARD

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

It is not generally known, but Ted Yarosz, the young welterweight star, of Monaca, turned down a place on the Young Jack Thompson-Lou Brouillard championship card in Boston Friday night to go through with his "natural" bout with Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, at Motor Square Garden next Monday night.

Ted Yarosz

Billy Ames, matchmaker for the Boston Madison Square Garden, was even thinking of going so far as to match Teddy with Johnny Indrisano, the highly-esteemed Bostonian, whom many of the stars have been avoiding for several years.

This will not be the first meeting between Belmont and Yarosz. They fought about a year ago in Oil City, with Yarosz winning the decision, although Belmont scored a brief knockdown in the ninth round.

CARD COMPLETED

The card is complete for Monday's show. Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, and Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth, box a return go in the eight-round semi-final; Jackie Wilson, of the East End, and Young Chaney, of the Hill, and formerly of Philadelphia, who technically stopped Johnny Warner in four rounds in his local debut, are in the second bout, and Billy Flanagan and Lloyd Clements, Braddock and Swissvale middleweight rivals, open the show.

Lou Saunders, of Beaver Falls, who boxes Lou (Kid) Wallace, of Youngstown, in the semi-final to the Lou Petrone-Eddie Brannon battle at McKeesport tomorrow night, will come in for a lot of attention. He has not appeared around here for a couple of years and meanwhile has been battling the best of the lightweights around the country.

Between Rounds

Herman Fulks, of Ambridge, who defeated Willie Gavalos at Newark, N. J., last Monday night, boxes Marty Goldman there next Monday.

The announcer who describes the battle throughout the showing of the films of the Primo Carnera-Jack Sharkey bout booked for a week beginning tomorrow at the Fulton Theater is none other than Sam Taub, veteran New York boxing writer.

Charley Baxter found through his difficulty in making the weight for his bout with Johnny Dubs at Motor Square Garden last Monday night that he is destined to be a full-fledged lightweight, and he will do his future boxing in that division, according to his manager, Charley Jones, who wants to send him against Young Gizzy.

St. John's Lyceum will stage an amateur boxing smoker in Turner Hall, Thirteenth street, South Side, next Tuesday night.

Charley Jones is the new manager of Georgie Bretsch, young welterweight socker, of the North side, who is ready to resume boxing now that he has worked himself back into good condition. Georgie is one of the toughest of our preliminary battlers in the matter of being able to take punishment and hand it out.

The Joey Spiegel-Marty Marin show scheduled in Uniontown tonight has been postponed at least a week, due to the fact that Marin suffered a hand injury. Benny McArthur and Nick Caruso top off a card in Fairmont, W. Va., tonight under the matchmaking auspices of Bernard Kelly, Jr., of McKeesport.

Young Gizzy plans to keep busy following his knockout victory over Jackie Dugan at McKeesport last Thursday night. He will box there again next Wednesday, likely in a double whing, with his stablemate, Jimmy Thomas, figuring in another 10-rounder, is wanted at Wheeling the following Monday and may close for a match with Sammy Dorfman at Motor Square Garden three weeks from next Monday.

Fights Tonight

Benny McArthur vs. Nick Caruso, 10 rounds; Paul Ogar vs. Johnny Dembo, 8 rounds; George Tomosky vs. Romeo Cassi, 8 rounds, and Kid Delaney vs. Billy McCabe, 4 rounds, Fairmont, W. Va.
Max Baer vs. Jose Santa, 10 rounds, Oakland, Cal.
Prince Saunders vs. Jimmy Alvaro and Johnny Pena vs. Carlos Mazzola, 10 rounds each, Detroit.
Sid Lampe vs. Johnny Lucas, 10 rounds, Charley Gomer vs. Clarence Sloat, 8 rounds; Dewey Adams vs. Jim Tunney, 6 rounds, and Joey Schwartz vs. Steve Miller, 4 rounds, Baltimore.

Dead Pensioned Horses Get $450 Monuments

CLEVELAND, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Two monuments, costing $450, will grace the graves of two great pacers beside the Oval at North Randall track.

They are to be in memory of Grace and Lillian R., pensioned by Capt. David A. Shaw when he died six years ago. Probate Court permission was granted yesterday for the expenditure from a $250,000 trust set up by "Cap'n Dave" for furtherance of his stable.

Only three harness horses—Prince, Loree, Peter Mac and Joan—still survive the once-great pensioned string for which Capt. Shaw built a beautiful $14,000 stable before his death.

The Coach's Viewpoint

By Howard Harpster

Geneva College Coach and Former All-America Star at Carnegie Tech.

Last Saturday's college football games contained more upsets than those of any other day so far this season . . . The biggest surprise was the way an untried Harvard team came from behind to defeat the highly-touted and admittedly strong Army eleven . . . Other upsets included Wisconsin's victory over Purdue, Bucknell's tie game with Temple and Ohio State's one-sided victory over Michigan . . . Although it was far from anyone's thought that Notre Dame might lose to Drake, I don't believe even the most optimistic Irish supporter had any idea that the Ramblers would ramble for nine touchdowns.

Howard Harpster

I was in Boston on Saturday with the Geneva team, and the people of that city were prepared to see their favorite, Harvard, take a football lesson from the Cadets of West Point . . . Not one of the coaches, newspapermen or fans that I talked to conceeded the Crimson even an outside chance of winning . . . Led by its great captain, Barry Wood, the Harvard team took exception to the act of the Army coach in putting in most of his second team after Army had got a 13-point lead, and proceeded to run the Cadets at double time all over the field . . . And between halves, when the Army mentor took his players to the dressing room for the rest period, instead of having a 13-point lead, he was trailing, 14 to 13 . . . My guess is that from now on the Army regulars won't get any rest, at least not until the second quarter gets under way.

Purdue, the most talked-of team in the Big Ten, couldn't have looked so very good in the first quarter, as Wisconsin scored three touchdowns, enough to win the game . . . Even though the defeat at the hands of Wisconsin will serve to make Carnegie Tech's cause more difficult when these two teams get together here next Saturday, it also should give the Tartan eleven more confidence, for it proved again that, no matter how great a team may be on paper, it still can be licked.

Notre Dame's 63 points against Drake will give all of its future opponents a vague idea of the strength of this year's Irish team . . . Pitt takes on Notre Dame next Saturday at South Bend and Carnegie meets Mr. Schwartz and company in the Stadium here next week . . . From what I saw of the Irish against Northwestern, it strikes me that both of our Pittsburgh teams will be in for a very strenuous afternoon . . . If either or both should win from the Ramblers, the national spotlight would be turned to focus on the winners, and the victorious team would be the talk of the land . . . It is an easy matter to attract the spotlight, but it will take a long 60 minutes of football to get it turned on.

RINK OPEN TONIGHT

Duquesne Garden will usher in its ice skating season tonight at 8:30.

RHODY WALLACE RETURNS TO BURY FATHER

Rhoderick J. (Rhody) Wallace, a native of Pittsburgh, and a top-notch infielder in the major leagues for almost 20 years, is back home on a sorrowful mission. Wallace yesterday assisted in the burial of his father, John Wallace, a resident of Millvale for 35 years who died a few days ago at Redondo Beach, near Los Angeles, the home of Rhody and his dad for the past 11 years. Rhody is a scout for the Cincinnati club of the National League. Aged 84, the elder Wallace before his death expressed a wish to be buried at the side of his wife and the diamond star's mother who passed away 14 years ago. Accordingly, the body of the father with fitting ceremonies was interred at Meyers Cemetery, Millvale, yesterday.

Rhody Wallace

A Civil War veteran, the old-time soldier was honored by the members of his G. A. R. post in Los Angeles before the body started eastward. It was accompanied by the son, and the G. A. R. here assisted in the religious services held at the grave. Two daughters also survive: Mrs. Harry Green, of Redondo Beach, Cal., and Mrs. A. Mamaux, of Canton, O.

PLEASANT MEMORIES

Rhody Wallace's visit to Pittsburgh recalls myriad memories to baseball fans of yesteryear. This section has sent many stars into the national game, but few have shone as brightly as the little pitcher, who later was to become one of the greatest infielders of the sport.

Born in the West End, but a long-time resident of Millvale, Rhody began his professional career with the Franklin Club, of the Iron and Oil League, in 1894. Later he became a shortstop and third baseman, the brightest part of his long career being spent with the St. Louis club of the American League.

While playing shortstop for the Browns, Wallace was regarded as being at the top of the list of shortfielders in the art of touching out daring and skillful baserunners. The great Ty Cobb was in his heydey when Rhody performed in the shortfield. Ty had so many different slides he was able to evade many infielders, but it is stated that Wallace always got the ball on the great baserunner, provided the catcher gave it to him in time.

BOOSTS BARBEE

Wallace also was known as Bobby to baseball men. For many years he has been in the employ of the Cincinnati club. He expects to leave tonight for Cincinnati, where he will confer with the Red owners before leaving for Los Angeles.

Rhody had a good word for Dave Barbee, the homerun walloper drafted by the Pirates from the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast League. Wallace thinks the big fellow will add something to the punch of the Buccos.—CHARLES J. DOYLE.

College Club Here Honors Memory Of Sam Dreyfuss

The Harvard-Yale-Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania honored the memory of Sam Dreyfuss at its weekly luncheon today. In paying a tribute to the departed treasurer of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club the college men gave a collection of books as the start of a library on sports. William E. Benswanger, son-in-law of Owner Barney Dreyfuss, represented the family at the ceremony.

BURNS BATTLES OLYMPIC CLUB TONIGHT

By TOM BIRKS

With the Dan Burns and McKeesport Olympics fighting to overtake the fast-stepping Rooneys in the West Penn Gridiron Conference, all eyes will be turned to Parnassus High School field this evening where the Burns and Olympics clash.

Burns proved in the West View game that it is in the peak of condition, and the boys are playing their heads off behind Stan Berkman to give the Firemen a winner.

The Olympics are strong, especially in its line and New Kensington fans will see a line led by Tank Highberger, expected to be the equal of the famous Burns line.

It is expected to be a battle between two of the smartest quarterbacks in the conference, Hymie Goldberg, who received his schooling under Steffan, at Carnegie Tech, and Berkman, former captain and quarterback at Thiel.

MARKET FACES ABOUT AFTER EARLY DROP

Rails Rally Only Partly, But Some Others More Than Regain Their Losses

NEW YORK, Oct. 21—(AP.)—The stock market refused to be downcast as result of the moderate and qualified increases in freight rates granted the railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The market was dragged down by a rather wide break in the carrier issues during the morning and speculators who had endeavored to clean up on the basis of a partial leak on the decision yesterday received burned fingers. After midday the market started upward under leadership of the utilities. The rails rallied only partly but several of the utilities and industrials more than regained early losses.

American and Foreign Power soon recorded a gain of 2 points and other issues up a point or more included Johns Manville American Power and Light Pacific Lighting Rivers International Match preferred and Coca Cola. Such issues as American Can American Telephone United States Steel Sears Roebuck and Consolidated Gas rebounded after selling off 2 to 3 points. In the rails there were recoveries of 1 to 3 points after losses of 4 to 8 in such issues as Union Pacific Southern Pacific New York Central Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania. Trading grew active on the afternoon advance.

Midweek business statistics indicated little important change in underlying conditions but it was reported in important banking circles that confidence in American securities appeared to be returning both at home and abroad and that careful buying was coming from leading financial quarters.

It was explained however that business recovery would undoubtedly be a slow process. The Iron Age weekly review said that steel production has sagged to 28 per cent of capacity from 29 per cent a week previously. The weekly freight car loadings showed some recession after the sharp gain reported a week previously. The report of electric power consumption for the week ended October 17 showed scant change.

The reaction to the decision on freight rates was not wholly adverse. Pending the meeting of the railway executives association in Atlantic City tomorrow, officials were generally unwilling to make formal comment.

Credit conditions were largely stationary. Call money was offered outside at 2 per cent although the loan desk rate was maintained at 2½. The city of New York borrowed $32,500,000 on three-month paper at 4¼ per cent, however, in contrast to 1⅝ per cent on similar borrowings a few weeks ago.

STEEL DEMAND BROADENING

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say:

The Interstate Commerce Commission's decision, announced late Tuesday, permitting limited freight rate increases overshadows in importance other developments in the metal-working industries this week.

Proposed increases are 2 cents per 100 pounds on steel, $6 per car on pig iron and scrap, $3 on iron ore, coal and coke and $10 on machinery and other metal products. Whether these advances are sufficient to influence buyers generally to abandon their extreme caution and lay in some stocks before the new rates take effect, and whether the railroads themselves will become more liberal in their steel and equipment orders are questions that cannot be answered at this early date, but it is expected that some business stimulation will result. New tariffs must be filed by December 1, and rates would run until March 31, 1933.

There are scattered indications of a slight broadening in demands for steel, coupled with reports of visible improvement in the business of some metal-working manufacturers, but the aggregate of these new requirements is not sufficient to offset the small demands from lines that normally account for the heaviest consumption of steel. Consequently steel ingot production is still lower this week at 28 per cent of capacity. The falling off is partly accounted for by completion of pipe orders and a slackening of tin plate output.

Bankers Should Call French Bluff; Threat to Withdraw Gold Reflects Arrogance

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.

AMERICA SHOULD promptly call France's bluff by telling her to take back every dollar of gold she owns or controls in New York.

B. C. Forbes

France has achieved so much success in applying pressure to second-grade European countries and has had so much of her own way in dealing with Germany that apparently she feels she can dictate to the United States.

In a nutshell the Bank of France has issued this threat: pay us a higher rate of interest on our American deposits or we will withdraw our funds.

Back should go the reply:

"Withdraw your funds whenever you please. We neither need them nor want them."

FIRST GERMANY'S financial and economic position was undermined. Then Britain's Next a vicious campaign against America's financial strength was unleashed. It so frightened uninformed Europeans that there was wholesale selling of American securities by them and a rush by various European countries to withdraw gold from New York.

Europeans were incited to believe that the United States was on the brink of abandoning the gold standard and that France would majestically occupy the world's gold throne.

America would be distinctly more comfortably circumstanced were France to recall all her gold, all her balances, all her outstanding credits here. We can easily spare them. We would be better without them and the overhanging threat of sudden withdrawal.

THE MORE foreign-owned gold transferred to Europe, the better. Other countries with the exception of France, need more gold. We need less. The more gold the Bank of France piles up in her vaults, the smaller the bank's profits and, the greater the decline in her shares —they have already sunk more than 50 per cent since the French bank started piling up idle yellow metal.

Did you notice that Japan, too, backed away when she found that her protests could not move our administration?

HAVING DELVED into the whole sorry Bank of United States mess, I for one, am profoundly convinced that State Banking Superintendent Broderick acted all along with good intentions and that he is a 100 per cent honest man.

He did, however, in my humble opinion, underrate all along the seriousness of the tottering bank's condition. Even so, the taking-over of the institution and the placing of it under highly responsible management was definitely arranged, and was all ready for final consummation when an executive of one of the banks to be merged suddenly and most unexpectedly kicked over the traces. The coming investigation doubtless will uncover this fact and the identity of the gentleman responsible.

As to the management of the Bank of United States, it was shocking.

NOW THAT HOARDING is dying out, the problem is how to attract the hoarded money back into use. Over a quarter of a billion dollars has been added to our postal savings deposits within the last 12 months and more is being added daily.

Henry L. Doherty, an extremely fertile and independent thinker, suggests that his column urge Secretary Mellon and his administration associates to have the Treasury Department issue, for universal distribution throughout the country, treasury obligations running for very short periods, for medium periods and for longer periods, so that there will be naturities twice or three times each week.

Mr. Doherty is confident that many frightened bank depositors who have withdrawn their funds would be glad to put them into U. S. government securities if they could select their own maturity dates—that is, if they could get securities cashable at practically any date they desired.

He advocates the paying of a low, not a high, rate of interest, so as not to compete with savings banks or other financial institutions. Such securities, to be most effective, would have to be readily available in every community, so that any individual could walk up to the counter, buy what he or she wanted, return and get back the money with interest, all with the lowest possible minimum of red tape.

SENTIMENT IS STILL rising in high financial circles. Stocks and bonds are not the only things farsighted financiers are beginning to buy. Basic raw materials are regarded as having alluring speculative possibilities.

RAIL WORKERS STUDY WAGE PROBLEM

Brotherhoods Delve Into Situation Seeking Basis For Legislative Action

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

Financial Editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Effort to readjust railroad wages and working hours may in the near future call for solving a most important and complex domestic economic problem. Present federal legislation dealing with railroad labor disputes was enacted in 1926. The Watson-Parker act repealed the New-lands act of 1913 and that section of the transportation act of 1920 which established the Railroad Labor Board.

Three ways to settle disputes are set up by the Watson-Parker Act in a comprehensive system for readjustment founded upon satisfactory provisions in earlier legislation. These are:

HOOVER CAN INTERVENE

If all these means fail to settle a controversy and a tie-up of the railroads threatens, the President of the United States is empowered to appoint an emergency board to investigate the dispute and publish recommendations.

If this last resource is invoked no strike, lockout, wage reduction or change in working conditions is permitted during the period of investigation or for 30 days after the emergency board has made its report.

RELIEF STUDIED

A special committee of 21 railroad brotherhoods is making a survey of the railroad unemployment situation. The average number of Class I railroad employes is now approximately 355,000 less than the average number during 1929.

The purpose of the brotherhoods' committee is to work out a plan of relief as a basis for legislation to be sought in the next Congress. D. B. Robertson, chairman of the unions' committee, has said that all the 21 brotherhoods agree that:

"Shorter working hours and a shorter working week are the only means by which the unemployed railroad men can be put back to work."

In this connection it seems worth remarking that during the boom year of 1929 the average number of Class I railroad employes was only about 13,000 larger than the number back in 1916.

URGES SHORTER HOURS

In urging a six-hour day as the next necessary step in progress, William Randolph Hearst, in a notable editorial last Sunday, pointed out:

"Hours have decreased from 14 hours a day at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century to eight hours a day at the beginning of the Twentieth Century.

"It is time for another reduction in hours.

"Labor-saving machinery makes a reduction of hours possible, and in fact necessary.

CONGRESS HAS POWER

If the railroad brotherhoods petition Congress to establish a six-hour day for railroad employes they will merely be asking the exercise of a recognized federal power.

In the autumn of 1916 passage of the Adamson act established the eight-hour day for train service employes. The constitutionality of this act was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in March, 1917.

Check Collections Helped by Federal Reserve

This is the eighth article of a series describing the workings of the Federal Reserve System and discussing the changes in its operations which probably will be suggested at the next session of Congress.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE OPERATIONS OF THE FEDERAL Reserve System have been responsible for many business changes, but the assistance it has given to check collections has been the most obvious service to the average individual.

Before the organization of the Federal Reserve Banks, the transfer of money from one part of the country to another was an intricate business which usually involved collection expenses. In recent years charges for collecting checks have practically disappeared. This aid to banking operations has been entirely due to Federal Reserve Bank operations.

In the past, payments from a bank in one city to a bank in another involved the actual transportation of currency. Bank funds were tied up in transit for long periods. Service charges were made to defray the expense and risk to banks.

As a result of these charges, many firms required the payment of their accounts in New York funds, Chicago funds or in money immediately available at some other important banking center. The expense of actually transporting cash from one city to another sometimes resulted in situations closely parallel to those in the foreign exchange markets. New York or Chicago funds were sometimes quoted at a premium.

Collection Costs Large

BEFORE THE DEVELOPMENT of the Federal Reserve System, the settlement of out-of-town accounts involved many complications. Let us assume that a merchant in Boulder, Col., had bought merchandise from a manufacturer in Connecticut. He would probably find that the invoices would be marked "payable in New York funds." The merchant would have to buy a draft on a New York bank. To render this service, a local bank would have to carry an account in New York and would charge a fee as compensation. If his purchases were made in many parts of the country, the cost of buying drafts on various financial centers would amount to a large item.

If a man in Williamsport, Pa., had a transaction with a firm in Colorado and made payment with a check, the procedure of collection was slow and costly. The Colorado bank probably would send the check to a correspondent bank in Chicago with whom it had an account. It would charge a fee for its services. The Chicago bank might have no correspondent in Williamsport and would send the check to a New York bank. The New York bank would find a bank which had funds of the Williamsport bank on deposit and would make collection. The Williamsport bank might finally deduct a fee for its service for keeping a deposit in New York. There would be a long period of delay as well as expense at each end of the transaction. The bank in Colorado might refuse to allow its customer to draw against the check during the period of collection or it might charge interest in the money during this period.

Gold Settlement Fund

THE FEDERAL RESERVE System materially simplified check collections. Service charges have practically disappeared. Accounts are no longer payable in the funds of a particular financial center. At present the Colorado bank would deposit its check on the Williamsport bank in the Federal Reserve branch at Denver. The Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank would be notified of charges against its account by private wire. The Williamsport bank would be given a credit in Philadelphia.

Instead of an actual transfer of funds, the movement would be a matter of bookkeeping. The 12 Federal Reserve banks maintain a gold settlement fund at Washington. Any balances in settlement of transactions between the banks are settled by additions to or deductions from the share in this gold fund. A mere telegram takes the place of the slow exchange of funds of former days.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The bond market was highly irregular today. Trading was less active.

Railroad obligations responded promptly to the decision on the petition for an increase in freight rates by making a general decline. Prices of the more active issues were from 1 to 3 points lower than yesterday's close.

United States Liberty and Treasury bonds experienced quiet trading, but they were firm to moderately higher.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, odd sometimes in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

THE ROAD BACK -:- By Erich Maria Remarque

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The earth is smelling of March and violets. Snowdrops are showing above the damp mold. The furrows of the field are shimmering purple.

We walk down a path through the woods—Willy and Kosole in front, Valentin and I behind them. It is the first time for months that we have all been together. We do not often see one another.

Karl has lent us his new car for the day. He has not come himself, he has not the time. He has been making a mint of money these last few months, for the mark is falling and that favors his business. So his chauffeur has driven us out.

"What are you doing exactly, Valentin?" I ask.

I look at him in surprise. "Since when?"

"Oh, a long time. My partner—you remember her? — she soon chucked me. She dances in a restaurant now. Fox trots and tangoes. There's more demand for that these days. And, well, you see, an old army hoboe's not smart enough for that sort of thing."

"Do swing-boats bring in much, then?" I ask.

He shakes his head. "Don't talk about it! Not enough to live on, yet too much to die on, if you follow me. And this everlasting traipsing about! We're on the road again tomorrow. To Krefeld this time. Properly up the pole, as you might say, Ernst.—What's become of Jupp, do you know?"

"And Arthur?"

"He's well on his way to being a millionaire," I reply.

"He knows a thing or two!" nods Valentin sadly.

REST IN WOODS

Kosole halts and stretches his arms. "Well, boys, it's grand walking, no mistake—if only a man hadn't to be out of work in order to do it!"

"Don't you think you'll get something again soon?" asks Willy.

Ferdinand shakes his head. "It's not so easy. I'm on the black list, you see. Not docile enough. Still, a man's healthy, that's something. I borrow a bit off Tjaden now and then to keep me going. He's well dug in among the suet."

We call a halt at a clearing in the wood. Willy hands around a box of cigarets that Karl has given him. Valentin's face brightens. We sit down and smoke.

The tops of the trees creak softly. A few birds are twittering and the sun is already strong and warm. Willy yawns largely and then stretches out on his overcoat. Kosole makes himself a sort of pillow of moss and lies down likewise. Valentin is sitting pensively on the trunk of a beech tree, watching a green ground beetle.

I look at the old familiar faces and in a moment everything seems changed: here we are, all squatting together again, as so often before—only we are fewer now—but are we really together still?

EXCITED CHILDREN

Kosole pricks up his ears. Out of the distance comes a sound of voices. Young voices. It will be the Wandervogel, the birds of passage, making a first ramble with their guitars and their ribbons this silver-misted day. We used to do the same before the war — Ludwig Breyer and Georg Rahe and I. I lean back and think of those times—the evenings around the camp fire, the folk songs, the guitars and the lovely nights full of stars over the tent. That was just our youth. In the Wandervogel of those days was all the fresh romance and enthusiasm of youth, that afterward still lingered on in the trenches a short while, only to collapse at last in 1917 under the awful horrors of the battle of machines.

The voices are coming nearer. I prop myself on my arms and raise my head to see the procession go by. It is strange! Only a few years back we still belonged to all that—and now it seems as if they were an entirely new generation, a generation to follow ours, that can take up again the things that we had to let fall.

Shouts resound. A full chime, almost a choir. Now but a single voice again, indistinct, not yet to be understood. Twigs break and the ground trembles to many footsteps. Again a shout. Again the footsteps; they stop; silence. Then, sharp and clear, a command: "Cavalry approaching on the right!—By squads, right, right wheel!—Double march!—"

Kosole jumps up. I also. We stare at one another.—Are we bewitched?—What can that mean?

Already they are breaking cover from the undergrowth in front of us; they run to the edge of the wood and throw themselves on the ground. "Range 400!" snaps the same voice as before. "Covering fire—Fire!"

A rattling clatter. A long line of 16 and 18-year-old boys lying side by side along the edge of the wood. They all wear waterproof jackets with leather girdles buckled about them like soldiers' belts. All are dressed alike, gray jackets, puttees, caps with badges; uniformity has been deliberately emphasized. Each has a walking stick with a steel point, with which he is battering on the tree trunks in imitation of machine-gun fire.

But from under the warlike caps there look out young, red-cheeked children's faces. Watchful and excited, they peer away to the right in search of approaching cavalry. They do not see the tender miracle of the violets among the brown leaves—nor the purple bloom of the coming spring that lies over the plowed fields—nor the downy, soft fur of the leveret that is hopping there along the furrows. Ah, yes, they do see the leveret!—but they are aiming their sticks at it and the clatter on the tree trunks swells mightily.

CALLED TRAITORS

Behind them stands a powerful fellow with a bit of a paunch, also in waterproof jacket and puttees. He beefs out his commands: "Slow fire! Two hundred yards!" He has a pair of spyglasses and is observing the enemy.

"What do you call this?" Kosole growls.

But he lands himself in hot water. The leader, who is now joined by two confreres, glares and thunders. The soft spring air is loud with bold words. "Shut your mugs, you damned shirkers! You enemies to the Fatherland! You bunch of traitors!"

The boys now join in eagerly. One shakes his small fist. "We'll have to give you a good hiding!" he pipes up in his high-pitched voice. "Cowards!" chimes in another. "Pacifists!" cries a third. "These Bolsheviks must all be rooted out, or Germany will never be free!" shouts a fourth glibly and pat.

"That's right!" The leader pats him on the shoulder and makes toward us. "Run them off, lads!"

At that moment Willy wakes up. He has been asleep until now. He is still a good soldier in that if he lies down for long he at once goes to sleep.

He stands up. The leader pulls up short at once. Willy looks about him in surprise and explodes into laughter. "What's this? A fancy-dress ball?" he asked. Then he grasps the situation. "Well, well—so there you are!" he growls at the leader. "We've been wondering what had become of you for a long time now! Yes, yes, I know, the Fatherland—it's all yours, by deed of settlement, eh? And everyone else is a traitor—so? Funny thing, then, that three-quarters of the German army were traitors. Just you hop off now, you jackanapes! Why can't you let the kids enjoy the few years that are left to them, while they need still know nothing about it?"

The leader draws off his army. But the wood is spoiled for us. We go back into the village. Behind us, rhythmical and syncopated, echoes the cry: "Frontheil! Frontheil! Frontheil!"

"Frontheil!" Willy clutches his hair. "If anyone had said that to the lads up the line!"

"Yes," says Kosole sourly, "so it begins all over again—"

DAILY SHORT STORY

Charming

Fight Arises Over Closing Of Private Roadway

"The day's all right," Peter replied, shortly.

Morley chewed his cigar savagely.

"Man!" Peter exploded, with a grunt of disgust.

"Well, tell us about it, Pete. How come he's butting into our quarry like he owned it?"

"Bought the Smith property—he's the party I told you about. I hadn't seen him when I heard that some man named Ellison had bought it from the executors. I only saw him yesterday. He was pointed out to me as I drove in. He was watching the workmen paint the house and fix up the place."

They watched Mr. Dudley Ellison as he sauntered around the great quarry. He seemed to be quite interested in the powerhouse, where the lifting cables got their power for hoisting the huge blocks of granite from the depths of the quarry to the truck yard.

INTRODUCE SELVES

"What about him?" Joe Garnett asked.

"Don't know. Ask Judge Phelps, who handled the deal for the heirs. He said this Ellison chap was all right.

Mr. Dudley Ellison was retracing his steps. He paused before Peter Morley and Joe Garnett.

"Charming, isn't it, gentlemen." He said it as a statement, not as a question.

"What's charming?" Peter demanded.

"Nothing so dam' charming in hunks of rock, but, Mister, there's money in it. You're Ellison, aren't you?"

"Oh, yes. Mr. Dudley Ellison, and you are Morley or Garnett, aren't you?"

"I'm Morely, this is Mr. Garnett. Mr. Ellison is to become one of our sturdy citizens in Hopedale, Joe."

"Good, very good."

"Oh, yes, Hopedale is charming," Mr. Ellison asserted.

Peter Morley grunted and moved away. Joe coughed a little and asked, "What's your line, Mr. Ellison?"

"Designing." Mr. Dudley Ellison smiled at both men.

"Designing?" Peter asked, curiously.

DESIGNER OF HATS

Mr. Dudley Ellison nodded.

"Designing," he repeated.

"Lighthouses or skyscrapers?" Morley asked. He thought in terms of construction that used granite.

"Hats," Mr. Dudley Ellison informed him.

"Hats?" snorted Morley.

"People have to have hats, you know that, Pete," Joe Garnett spoke gravely. Peter knew Joe. He was, as Peter often put it, "wearing his kidding clothes."

"Women's hats?" Peter Morley fairly bellowed this.

"Certainly, Pete—and it takes a lot of designing to plan a woman's hat," Joe said gravely.

"Indeed it does, sir. I take it that you are Mr. Garnett."

Joe admitted his identity.

"It must be," he said, quite seriously and with well simulated admiration in his voice, "a great mental strain to design women's headgear—it must call for a great deal of cleverness and ingenuity."

"Oh yes, yes, indeed." Mr. Dudley Ellison was smiling happily now. "It is quite an art."

"Strikes me as a helluva business," Peter growled. Peter was noted for being blunt and outspoken.

"Well, glad we are fellow townsmen now. Do drop into my salon when you are in the city." Mr. Dudley Ellison bowed politely and was about to go on.

"Saloon? What's the idea? You hiding a speakeasy under a hat shop disguise?" Peter demanded.

"My salon—or studio or atelier—a sort of workship for art, you know. Really a charming place."

"I doubt if I can wait until I'm able to run in and see your hats," Joe Garnett said, gravely.

"Welcome any time—be charmed," and with this, Mr. Ellison sort of compromised between lifting his hat and saluting.

ROAD BLOCKED

Mr. Ellison sauntered down the wide lane that led to the highway and the freight station a short distance away. He seemed to be quite interested in it.

"He'll be an ornament to our men's club," Joe murmured.

It was a week later that Peter showed signs of unusual irritation.

"You know Nora?"

"I'll say I do—I'd give a million dollars if I had a daughter and she was as pretty and witty and nice as your Nora, Pete."

"What do you think—you couldn't think—that Ellison wants to marry her!"

"But Nora likes him—she'd marry him if I would let her."

Peter almost wailed the words.

"My Gawd," was all Joe could say.

"I told him I'd slaps his ears down if he ever looked at Nora again and what I told Nora was plenty. Of all the gall—that big sissy! Imagine me with that sap for a son-in-law always under foot, talking about designing women's lids and saying 'Chawming' every other word. If I ever catch him so much as looking at Nora I'll—what the devil?"

Workmen were setting up cement posts where the lane entered the street. Peter and Joe went down to see about it. The workmen knew nothing except that it was done on Mr. Ellison's orders.

Ellison wasn't to be found.

The next morning heavy logging chains, three of them, were stretched across to the posts and padlocked. The trucks couldn't get into or out from the quarry.

"Mustn't do that—I forbid it—sorry, but I must forbid it," Mr. Ellison said.

Peter Morley's temper was none too good. This time it was extremely bad.

"I told you, you so-and-so, that I'd slap your ears down and I meant it!" Peter swung a flat hand at Mr. Ellison's head. Mr. Ellison moved just enough to avoid the hand and socked Mr. Morley heavily on the nose. Peter gave a howl of rage and leaped in. Mr. Ellison almost imperceptibly ducked his wide swings and stepped in with a right to the wind and a hard left to the jaw and Mr. Morley sat down.

"Hey, we've been using this road for years, it's a right of way!" Joe yelled, stepping between the calm Mr. Ellison and the madman, Morley.

"You have been using it 19 years and seven months. If I let you use it 20 years it will be your property, and so I must close it. If you tear down my barrier I shall have a guard here to prevent its being done again. This is my property, now that I have bought the estate. Old man Smith gave you permission to drive through to your quarry, but it was just verbal permission. When a place has been used as a public way for 20 years it is lost to the owner. Is that clear to you, Mr. Morley?"

"But — but — look here, we can't get to our quarry, we'd have to go miles around and buy a couple estates to get to it. I won't stand for it!" Morley cried. However he knew the law and he knew that Ellison was right.

FATHER CONSENTS

"I knew that before I bought this property, Mr. Morley. In fact, when Nora told me you probably wouldn't consent to our marriage and that she wouldn't marry me until you did consent, I began to look about to find a means to get you to consent."

Peter Morley was breathing hard. His ribs hurt and his chin hurt. No Ellison could never jolt him like that. Then he saw Nora coming toward the lane.

"Come down here, Ellison," Peter said.

They went down and met Nora and had a talk. Joe Garnett gasped, for, after five minutes' talk, he saw Mr. Dudley Ellison and Peter Morley shaking hands.

"Take down the obstruction," Mr. Ellison ordered. His men proceeded to do so.

He tucked Nora's little hand beneath his arm—the left arm that had socked her father so terrifically on his stubborn old jaw. He smiled at Mr. Peter Morley and Mr. Joseph Garnett.

"We will be seeing you later, gentlemen. Charming day, isn't it?" he said.

"Charming," Peter Morley agreed.

WHY PITTSBURGH IS GREAT

The Taxicab Rate Cut

The People Were Entitled to It, and It Should Prove Good Business Policy.

Both the public and the cab companies are to be congratulated on the cut in taxi rates effective today.

The public was entitled to the reduction, for taxicab fares here were higher than in most cities.

The people will be grateful for the cut, even though it may have been and probably was prompted by the idea that lower rates would attract customers who otherwise would not use the cabs and so would prove more profitable than the higher rate. It no doubt will prove to be good business policy.

The taxicab companies making the reduction have a monopoly in Pittsburgh and every attempt that has been made by other companies to break the monopoly has failed because of the public Service Commission's disapproval. The high rate now superseded was authorized by the Public Service Commission, and the taxi companies might have continued to charge it indefinitely without competition.

The fact that they voluntarily reduced it will tend to promote good-will for the companies, an asset that they have not had in any too generous a measure.

Another transportation concern which needs good-will is the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, operator of the bus lines, also a monopoly. The company charges 25 cents for a ride. In other cities such a ride costs only 10 cents.

Pittsburgh should be brought into line with other American communities in its bus rates as well as its taxicab fares.

Diminishing Returns

An Old Law of Economics Is Illustrated in Pittsburgh's Tax Delinquencies.

Under Mayor Kline's administration the city tax rate on land has increased from 19.5 to 25.5 mills.

In the same period tax delinquencies have increased from $2,272,924 to $4,779,569.

We have here a beautiful illustration of the economic law of diminishing returns.

The higher the tax rate the greater the number of people unable to pay their taxes.

The city may find its revenues greater in the long run from a lower rate.

Commercial enterprises of all sorts are reducing prices. In Cleveland the tax burden has just been reduced by a slash in the assessed valuation of land.

The Pittsburgh taxpayer's burden must also be reduced.

Step Toward Prosperity

Establishment of Six-Hour Day Will Help Us Back to Economic Health.

Now is the time to reorganize American industry on the basis of a fair division of profits between American workmen and American employers.

Now is the time for American businessmen to recognize the fairness of the six-hour day and to establish it everywhere in this country.

When they do that they will be taking a long step forward toward a solid and enduring prosperity. But they must accept the six-hour day as a useful and necessary fact.

We have heard much during these two lean years about "technological unemployment." What IS "technological unemployment?" It is a many-syllabled explanation of a simple fact—the displacement of men by machines. Great men like the late Thomas Edison have used their brains and invented marvelous machines for the benefit of man. Industrialists have taken those machines and used them for the benefit of INCREASED PROFITS. Instead of sharing those profits with the workers they have put them in their own pockets. First the retirement age crept lower and lower until men of 40 years began to lose their jobs. Then, as other conditions came in, millions of men lost their jobs and they have been waiting for more than two years to get those jobs back.

But hundreds of thousands of them may never see those jobs again. Why not? Because machines have taken them and will not give them up. They are good machines. They are useful machines. But as long as they are owned by selfish or short-sighted men they are dangerous and destructive instruments of misery. And as long as some men take the almost divine discoveries of their fellowmen and use them for their own enrichment, we can have no complete economic recovery in this country.

The six-hour day for workers is the answer. The instinct of workmen in all ages, when they fought the introduction of new inventions, has been pervertedly right. But they should not have fought against the machines. They should have fought for a division of the increased profits made possible by the invention. That's what the six-hour day in industry will achieve. Last Sunday William Randolph Hearst said:

"It has been the habit of the employing classes to take the full benefit of labor-saving machinery and capitalize it, depriving the working people of their due share of this benefit.

"The advantage of labor-saving machinery should be distributed to the employers in greater profits, to be sure, and to the consumer in cheaper prices; but above all to the working people in shorter hours, better wages and better living conditions.

"Employers should realize that they have no moral right to monopolize these benefits and should have no legal right to do so.

"They must, in common justice, common morality, and common advantage distribute these benefits.

"Employers must realize that the distribution of these benefits means advantage for the capitalistic classes as well as for the consuming and working classes; because without increased buying power on the part of the masses, there can be no sufficient market for increased production.

"The next step in order in the progress of industry is the six-hour day; and the six-hour day is already being adopted by the more progressive employers.

"There must be co-operation on the part of the working people, of course, to make the adoption of the six-hour day possible in this period of depression.

"But capital might just as well understand here and now that an intelligent public opinion will no longer permit the employing class to monopolize all the benefits of invention, but will insist upon those benefits being shared with its employes and with the consuming public."

Do we wish a booming and gracious prosperity to return? Do we wish those millions of unemployed to have jobs once more? The six-hour day will be a powerful lever to help us back to economic health and happiness again.

BUSINESS REVIVAL
YE PUNISHMENT OF PROHIBITION FOR CAUSING CRIMES AND DISORDERS AND FOR BEING A GENERAL PEST.
WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, GIRL, PUTTING ME IN THE STOCKS AFTER ALL I'VE DONE FOR THEM? DID YOU EVER HEAR OF SUCH INGRATITUDE?
DON'T SPEAK TO ME! I WAS HAPPY TILL I MET YOU!

At last it has happened. Old Prohibition and his little pals have been rounded up, and put where they can do no more harm.

This is a happy day for all of us, except Mr. Business Revival, who doesn't seem to know what has happened.

The judgment of the American people is sound in the long run, our lawmakers obeying the people's wishes. Prohibition, bandits, bootleggers, racketeers and child killers will worry us no more.

P. S.—WE FORGOT TO TELL YOU THAT THIS IS JUST A DREAM, PUBLISHED TO LIGHTEN UP THE DEPRESSION, IF ONLY FOR HALF A MINUTE.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Old Wives for New

No matter how many times a woman marries, she always runs true to type. But, every fresh divorce scandal in the newspapers convinces you that when a man remarries, he does it for a CHANGE. Not so much for an adventure, as for an escape.

What many an astonished wife would like to know it why a man will marry a woman for what the Lord made her, and immediately start in trying to remodel what he considered "Heaven's Masterpiece."

Why he will deliberately pick out a girl who flirts, smokes and goes in for all-night cocktail parties and whoopee, because he finds her "so congenial"—and then promptly expects her to remove the paint, cut out the cigarets, lose all interest in men and go to bed at 10 o'clock.

Why he will pursue a human iceberg, until he succeeds in melting her sufficiently to drag her to the altar—and then turn to a flaming jazz-girl, with a volcanic temperament and a warm, flattering line, for the affection and applesauce he doesn't get at home.

* * *

Or why he will succumb to the first clinging, warm hearted little thing who snuggles up to his shoulder and calls him her "Big Mama"—and later struggles to disentangle himself from her strangle hold, while he looks around for a practical, cool-headed pal, who can talk sense, treats him like a caddy and regards any display of affection as feeble-minded.

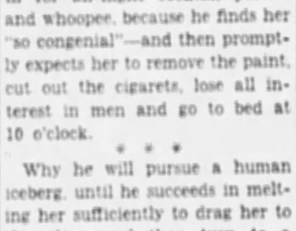
Why, at 20, he falls for an experienced, sophisticated woman, five years his senior, because of her superior mental charms—and then, at 40, begins dancing around with adolescent, baby-eyed blondes who have just graduated from Mother Goose, and begun reading the beauty ads, Sexy Stories and Bradstreet's.



Or why he will pick out a baby-doll, with one working brain-cell and a permanent lisp, for a household pet—and then finish by eloping with his efficient, hard-eyed, firm-chinned stenographer.

Yes, every woman wonders why a man, with a free will, plenty of time and a large and varied assortment of women to choose from, so seldom picks the type of woman he really needs, wants and admires, instead of something totally opposite.

* * *

But that's just where the "catch" comes in. It only LOOKS that way. Nine times out of ten, the woman a man marries is exactly the type he admires, the sort he needs, and the kind he wants. Only, when he has had her around for a few years, he wants a CHANGE. It's just human restlessness.

* * *

A woman works off her love of variety by buying new hats or moving the furniture around; but, when a man finds life monotonous and wants a change, he can think of nothing but a change of women.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—A pronounced New York neighborliness congeals at theatrical first nights. Because they attract almost the same crowd night after night, there is about them the familiarity of the yap town drug store after the evening meal.

Fifty per cent of the audience is composed of critics, producer's friends, ticket brokers and others directly concerned with Rialto affairs. It is rarely an audience fevered to high expectations. Even producers and angels become blase. To the majority it is just another play.

The representative audiences are seen at offerings by Arthur Hopkins, Messmore Kendall, Earl Carroll, Brock Pemberton, George White, and, of course, Flo Ziegfeld. Belasco in his day also drew the creme de la creme. George M. Cohan brings out the largest "personal following."

Despite managerial precautions and public warnings I have never attended but one opening where the curtain went up on scheduled time. They are invariably from 10 to 30 minutes late. This is largely because everybody knows everybody and refuses to be seated.

Critics, because those on morning papers must depart early, are always on aisle seats. As a rule seasoned chroniclers are given preference in near stage locations. Those attached to weekly publications are generally in about the middle of the house.

Here and there, leavened in among the gathering, are the columnists—F. P. A., Russel Crouse, Louis Sobol, Mark Hellinger and Karl Kitchen. In one of the first three rows will be Percy Hammond sitting in half-lidded indifference. Nearby the Gibson man come to life—John Anderson.

Kelcey Allen may be spotted by the pocket flash torch he carries to study program in dark moments. Among the most persistent first nighters are Sailing Baruch, Al Bedell, Leo Newman, Otto Kahn, Will Hays and wife, Conde Nast, Irving Berlin and William Leeds.

Broadway's flitting fame is frequently emphasized at premieres. They attract many who once shimmered in the limelight and passed from the picture. The other evening I saw a director whose string of successes made his profession merely a problem in selection 10 years ago. Yet few recognized him crouched in a far back seat. He looked seedy, a bit dissolute and altogether completely beaten.

* * *

Just before curtain time at every opening there are people waiting at the edge of the box office window. They know a Rialto trick. Seldom is there an opening without at least a half a dozen tickets turned in at the last moment. They cannot be returned to the agencies and must be sold quickly at box office or not at all. Often such seats are in the first few rows and the lucky purchase them at the stamped price.

* * *

A diversion of a first night, too, are those impish and white ermined ladies determined to be seen as well as heard. They yoo-hoo and hand wave across the aisle after coming in late, usually in a cocktail glow. In these stern, hidebound days when theater tickets are a drain on the purse, audiences are not so tolerant. Several times recently such disturbers have received a volley of hisses.

* * *

They were discussing inspired editorial hunches. One standing out was that of Mitchell Kennerly. The Forun. Magazine was on way to press when the great war rocked the world. Kenperly ripped out the leading article and substituted the Sermon on the Mount in large type. But the best, I think, was Jim Keeley's trigger turn on a Chicago paper. The morning after the Iroquois fire the entire front page was given over solely to a grim and alphabetical list of the dead.

From a news item: "She was so angry she threatened not only to snatch baldheaded those who came near her but to rip them to ravelings."

That's my idea of a hunk of mad.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Should it show them lying in their small, white coffins, with distracted mothers bending over them and wounded little brothers peering at them in terror?

Should it print photographs of flogged men with their flesh cut in strips? Or of swollen, muddy corpses dragged from the ocean, with arms trussed behind the back by the murderers? Or of innocent bystanders sprawled dead in bloody pools?

Certain newspapers in America have been doing this . . . and certain other journals which seldom publish any pictures, are horrified. They say that it is outrageous that refined citizens should be confronted with such sickening scenes . . . the decent homes should be "desecrated" by them . . . that the minds of innocent children should be "poisoned" by them. They say that papers which publish such scenes are both vicious and vulgar—

All of which certainly sounds genteel and reasonable. There's no denying that it's horrid to be faced with scenes in a newspaper that you'd walk miles to avoid . . . and maddening to have such scenes hurled into the midst of your safe and select living room—No wonder polite feelings are outraged!

But how about the feelings of the mother whose baby was murdered? Or the man whose flesh was flayed? Or the innocent bystander, cut in two by a machine gun volley?

If it's horrid for you to see these things depicted in a paper, how would you like to endure them in real life?

Every day, every hour, some one is enduring these outrages. Citizens as decent as you are being shot down in cold blood. Babies as sweet as yours are being kidnaped. At this very moment while you, sniffing with disgust, are reading this, some man is being "put on the spot"—tortured slowly to death, burned, beaten, strangled.

AND WHAT ARE YOU DOING TO STOP IT?

You don't like horrid pictures? Well, everything else has been tried. You've read hundreds of articles . . . heard hundreds of sermons . . . listened to hundreds of famous voices over the air. And what good has it done? Not a particle. You still say—"Isn't it awful!" And then go off and forget it.

You do nothing. But the "vulgar" papers, who don't give two hoots about gentility, they are doing something about it. They are making these horrors REAL. They are bringing that murdered baby right to your door step and saying:

"Look here, you! You're responsible for this. How do you like the looks of this little, limp, broken body? Not so pretty—huh? But you did this. You didn't actually fire the shot that splintered this little spine, but you murdered this baby, just the same. You murdered it by muddling around with food laws, by tolerating dishonest officials, by going to sleep or acting nice when you should'uv been out in the muck objecting.

"No, don't slam the door in my face. You can't shut out—this—though you slam a million doors. Here's exhibit A—a murdered baby. Look it over. If some heart-broken mother has to endure the feel of it lying in her arms, then the least that you, WHO KILLED IT, can do is to face its photograph. Look it over, Mr. Indifferent Citizen. Stop thinking about your pampered nerves. See what your pampered nerves have brought this country to. Look it over. HOW DO YOU LIKE YOUR STUFF?"

SCIENTIFIC IDEAL

By Archibald Henderson

The lofty aims and high purposes of the scientist cannot be dwelt upon too often. The scientist lives in a world of his own, engages in the pursuit of truth for its own sake. He is not trying to make a fortune, and often is not even trying to make a living. He is often seeking, quietly and unselfishly, to lift a corner of the veil behind which the mysteries of Nature are hidden. He is elevated, uplifted in spirit, by his studies and discoveries. They are their own reward. They may lead to no practical results, may add nothing to the world's wealth. But they add to the world's knowledge.

Indeed, some of the world's greatest scientists have not striven even for the praise of their fellows or the rewards of the world. What then are the chief motives of scientific study and research? In his book, Discovery, Sir Richard Gregory answers: chiefly love of knowledge and the joy of discovery; and possessing these things the man of science faces boldly all difficulties and is undaunted by danger.

One of the most unselfish of scientists, least concerned for praise or recognition, was Sir Isaac Newton, perhaps the greatest scientist of all time. How many scientists, of lesser caliber are constantly seeking to make good their priority of discovery? Compare this spirit with that of Newton. For several years after he had discovered the principles of the reflecting telescope and invented one, he neglected it; and finally it became known to some of the fellows of the Royal Society. It was only upon their insistence that Newton was induced to send the telescope, embodying a great new principle, to the Royal Society. Newton waited some five years, after making his important discoveries concerning the compound nature of sunlight, before communicating them to the Royal Society in 1672. The same indifference was displayed by Newton in regard to the greatness of all his discoveries, the law of universal gravitation, for example. After several years had passed, this monumental discovery came to the attention of Halley, who made it known to the world.

Some scientists seem preoccupied with one idea: to make some one, spectacular discovery. Others are content to do the most laborious work, merely for the sake of arriving at the exact facts regarding some natural phenomenon of a comparatively unexciting nature.

Our Leadership a National Bankrupt

By Claude G. Bowers

En route to Yorktown, President Hoover paused in his journey to make a radio appeal for aid to the jobless through private charity. With millions out of employment and hundreds of thousands forced on private charity to escape starvation, it is to be hoped that all who can afford to give will contribute as generously as possible. Of course, not enough will be subscribed by private charity to rid us of the breadlines that reflect shame on our civilization. It is demoralizing enough to be forced to take the bread of charity when one would prefer to work and get wages for services rendered, but it is less humiliating to the unfortunate than standing in a line-up on the street in the breadlines.

If our best thinkers are more concerned today with the "morale" of the workers than with the preservation of their homes, we are not at all convinced that the "American way" is more effective than the English way. It may be doubted whether a man's "morale" is shaken so much by giving him $8 a week to feed himself and family through the grocer than in lining him up as an exhibition in a breadline. But neither is necessary if the man can be given work, and the government of the United States has a superabundance of public work that can and should be done. We have somehow permitted ourselves to be convinced that it is not "the American way" for the government to furnish work in any crisis.

For a Prosperity Loan To Put Men to Work

There is no man in America more remote from socialism and radicalism than the Rev. John A. Ryan, the political economist, and he has a way constantly of reminding us of our duty that must be increasingly annoying to the Pollyannas in Washington. He, too, hopes that people with means will contribute to the care of the suffering this winter, but he says:

"The proposition that unemployment relief should be provided through private contributions and voluntary agencies is false in theory and inequitable and inadequate in practice."

He also has some ideas about "doles" that are not easy to confute. Thus:

"Private contributions to provide food, clothing and other necessities for the unemployed are doles. Relief expenditures by municipal authorities are doles."

If it is not a dole for municipalities, counties and states, why is it a dole for the federal government to furnish relief?

And Dr. Ryan cannot sympathize with the view of the federal authorities that if private charity passes out enough bread to prevent actual starvation, organized society has done its duty in the present crisis. He says:

"In a country as large as ours, men have a moral right to something more than immunity from starvation. They have a right to decent maintenance and elementary comfort."

In other words, they have a right to work, and he proposes a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan to put men to work in building roads and in making other needed improvements that permanently increase the wealth of the nation.

Bankers Are Eager to Get Their Interest

He is shocked at the thought of floating a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan to give work to the unemployed, and the American people are afraid that he may not be so much opposed to placing a burden of $11,000,000,000 on the people to relieve the burden of our debtors across the sea. Whatever his thoughts on the coming conference with M. Laval, the clever premier of France, there is no doubt as to what is in the mind of that distinguished statesman. He will discuss debts with Mr. Hoover even though Mr. Hoover does not discuss debts with him. The bankers here, who loaned billions to our debtors, knowing they owed us all these billions and claimed they could not pay, would like to see the eleven billions lifted so they could get their own billions back—with interest. This, of course, can be arranged by shifting the burden of the governmental debt from the people who borrowed the money to those who loaned it.

The average man would rather see $5,000,000,000 come out of the Treasury to put suffering humanity to work than to see $11,000,000,000 come out in the interest of other people.

Problem to Put Potential Buyers on Their Feet

There are two schools of political thought. One believes in taking care of the men at the top in the hope that some of their prosperity will drip through to the many below. This is the theory on which the administration at Washington moves.

The other school believes that the men at the top cannot be prosperous if the many down below are in distress.

The administration school is sure that with the banks protected, the anti-trust laws changed in the interest of the big industrialists, and the railroads given an increase in rates, all will be well.

The other school knows that neither the banks, the industrialists, the merchants or the railroads can be restored to their normal earning power as long as 30,000,000 people on the farms and 20,000,000 unemployed, including their dependents, are unable to buy.

The problem of prosperity in America is to find a way to put these 50,000,000 potential buyers on their feet, and the administration cannot see it.

Administration Weighed in Scale and Found Wanting

The truth, recognized by all, is that the administration in a grave crisis has been weighed in the scale and found wanting—wanting in vision, in initiative, in constructive capacity, in courage, and in human sympathy. It has no program now. So far as the public knows its thought is centered on maintaining the tariff rates that have admittedly been ruinous to trade; in turning Muscles Shoals over to the exploitation of private interests; to changing the Federal Reserve System in such a way as will make it less safe for the public, and safer for speculation; and to increase the rates for the railroads.

It has neither a record nor a program that will appeal to the people at the polls next year.

Japan Resents Stimson's Call on League of Nations

Secretary Stimson's call upon the League of Nations to settle the Manchurian trouble has been resented by Japan—because, primarily, this country is not a member of the League of Nations, and Japan is. And one does wonder why Mr. Stimson did not evoke the Kellogg Pact, which was touted at the time as the greatest instrumentality yet devised for the prevention of war. We thought at the time that the Kellogg Pact was vastly overrated, but did not expect to have this admission from the administration the moment the opportunity to test it came. Perhaps the great peace plans of the present regime, like its "prosperity," were a bit inflated. Is the Kellogg Peace Pact merely a pious prayer—as so many thought, and so few said?

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Too much effort to give up the sport or amusement which tempts?

And so easy to make excuses for your weakness.

"Indulgence quiets your nerves"—"makes your brain work faster"—"affords the air and exercise necessary to health"—"cheaper than to pay doctor's bills"

All these little points you have used time and again to prove that the course you follow is a good one.

But the real reason you have kept to yourself is that you do not intend to change your course but follow the line of least resistence.

It may carry you so far that you will give too little time to your business.

Are you not losing the sort of self-command that an adult should have?
